NATION BETWEEN MANY FIRES

Divers Factions in Mexico Arm and Take the Field.

ALL AGAINST THE GOVERNMENT

General Calles, in Charge of All the Armies of the Republic, Calls Upon Farmers and Workers to Support the Obregon Regime—Villa's Brother's Forces Would Carry Out Former Bandit's Platform.

Laredo, Tex., Dec. 17.—Mexico is not only between two, but many, fires.

General Plutarco Elias Calles has been appointed chief of all the armies of the republic by President Alvaro Obregon, and Calles has issued a manifesto calling upon the farmers and working classes to support the government against the reactionaries. In discussing his proposed manifesto, General Calles said: "It is very easy for me to start the ball rolling in a class war, but how will I stop it once it gets started?"

Besides the rebel forces under the De la Huerta banner seeking to overthrow the Obregon regime, General Angel Flores, until recently a candidate for the presidency, may take the field within a few days against both the government and the rebels, he having the support of the aristocratic element, which are against the division of their huge estates under the agrarian system.

Authentic information brings to light the fact that Raul Madero, brother of the deceased president of that name, has taken the field against the central government and is now organizing and equipping forces in the extreme southern end of the state of Chihuahua and throughout the state of Durango. Raul Madero's expedition is against the government, the rebels and the Flores faction.

In addition to this Hipolito Villa, brother of the former bandit chief, is now at Canutillo, in the state of Chihuahua, where he has forces ready to try to carry out his dead brother's platform for enforcement of the constitution of 1857 as against the constitution of 1917, and in addition making all native born citizens of Mexico free and equal, and forever abolishing the present system of holding peons in slavery.

President Obregon will personally command the federal forces, which are preparing to vigorously attack the rebels now holding the city of Puebla, according to an announcement in federal sources.

Although first announcements indicate that the federals would evacuate Puebla as part of the plans to draw the revolutionaries out on the mesa, the present reversal of that program indicates a new determination to halt the apparently uninterrupted march of the rebels on Mexico City. The government, it is declared, will fight to the last ditch to hold the seat of government.

General Luis Caballero and Alfred Ricaut have arrived at Tampico. Telegraphic announcement from Mexico City states that General Plutarco Calles is en route to Tampico for the purpose of recruiting forces from the farmers and laboring classes for the federal army to prevent invasion of the state of Tamaulipas by the rebels.

General Enrique Estrada, chief of the revolutionary forces in the Guadalupe district, with three battalions, four regiments and 10 airplanes, is now advancing on the Obregon forces in that region. In the state of Colima the Obregon government, headed by Huertado Flores, has been overthrown, the military forces joining the Huerta movement.

Wage Cuts Announced. Berlin, Dec. 17.—The German government's Christmas present to approximately 400,000 civil service and other national, state and municipal employees is a notice of impending dismissal to take place within three months. The second sack of the German government Santa Claus is a "happy New Year" for thousands more in the form of notices that cuts of 40 per cent will be made in wages under the pre-war standard. This means literal starvation, as the cost of living is two and a half times greater than before the war. To all protests the government replies in effect that if the state is to live the individual must be sacrificed.

Assistant Attorney General. Washington, Dec. 17.—Earl J. Davis of Michigan was nominated by President Coolidge to be assistant attorney general, succeeding John W. H. Kim, who recently resigned.

FRANK HAMPTON

Secretary to Senator Simmons of North Carolina.

According to reports in Washington Hampton is to have charge of the campaign of William G. McAdoo.

WANTS ACTION RESCINDED

Supporter of Johnson Goes After Republican National Committee.

Washington, Dec. 17.—Supporters of Senator Hiram Johnson declared here they would carry to the Republican national convention the fight against "packing" the floor with hand-picked southern delegations. In a statement issued by Representative Louis C. Cramton of Michigan, one of Senator Johnson's backers, he calls on the national committee to rescind its action of last week. Dr. Cramton assails as "unfair, unwise and unlawful" the decision last week by the committee in giving increased representation to southern delegations in the face of the expressed wishes to the contrary of the 1920 convention. Disaster in the 1924 election, he predicts, will be certain to follow any nomination brought about by handing over to southern delegations the balance of power in the convention.

STINNES' AMBITION RECEIVES SETBACK

German Government Not to Sell Nation's Railways.

Berlin, Dec. 17.—The bold dash of German industrial captains, led by Hugo Stinnes and associates, backed up by the farmers and junker agrarians, to get possession of Germany's vast network of governmentally owned railways, has received a temporary setback.

Stinnes and his associates, together with the farmers and junkers, sought to take advantage of the present critical financial situation to force the government to sell the railways to a private corporation organized by themselves.

In the effort to circumvent this move, Minister of Railways Oeser submitted to the cabinet a law severing the railway system from the national budget and placing it on its own financial footing, but without giving up government ownership and control. To help make revenue and expenditures meet it is proposed to dismiss 25 per cent of all employees. The Stinnes plan for the private operation of the railways has been rejected by Oeser, and is being fought in the cabinet, particularly by Stresemann, who appears to have completely broken with Stinnes.

Friends of Stinnes say that the movement to sever the railways from the budgetary system is a step in the direction of private operation. Stinnes is keeping up a campaign for private ownership as the only solution of the railways situation.

Dr. Parks Defies Bishops. New York, Dec. 17.—The threat of revolution in the Protestant Episcopal church became more ominous than ever when Dr. Leighton Parks, rector of St. Bartholomew's church, came out flatly against the Virgin birth and bodily resurrection and threw down a gauge of defiance to the "autocracy of bishops."

The venerable doctor, who is 71 years old, told his congregation that he would welcome a trial for heresy.

WHEELER SCENTS THIRD PARTY

Urges Progressive Democrats to Forsake "Reactionaries."

ASKS FOR A NEW ALIGNMENT

Junior Senator From Montana Would Have Progressive Forces of the South Join With the Progressives of the West and "Shake Off the Shackles of the Absentee Financial Landlords of New York."

Washington, Dec. 17.—The junior senator from Montana, Burton K. Wheeler, Democrat, called upon the progressive members of his party in the senate to forsake their reactionary leaders and stand forth in the name of the common people.

He predicted that perseverance in the path the party is now walking in will compel the formation of a third party and the wiping of the old parties from the political map next November.

Senator Wheeler was elected to the present congress on the Democratic ticket as a "progressive." Only a few days of his first term in congress had passed when, having notified his party leaders in the senate that the only assignment he cared to have and proposed to have was membership on the interstate commerce committee, he forced them to give it to him, and immediately went into action to prevent Senator Cummins of Iowa retaining the chairmanship of that committee. Senator Wheeler said:

"The people of this country are now divided into two great camps politically—progressives and reactionaries—those who believe we should change our laws to meet new conditions, and those who believe the laws made by our forefathers should be left as they were many years ago."

"The people are likewise divided into two great groups economically, those who produce and those who produce nothing. All those who are affected in the same manner economically should be in the same group politically; but today we find just the reverse to be true. In other words, we find progressives and reactionaries in the Republican party and reactionaries and progressives in the Democratic party."

"There should be a new alignment of parties. Either those progressives in the Republican party must control the destinies of that party and the progressives of the country support them, or they should join the progressive forces of the Democratic party and help to make it more responsive to the needs of the people."

"Economic changes have greatly modified the old alignment. The west no longer clings to the apron strings of the east. The economic interests of the west and the south are similar. The only hope of the country is for the progressive forces of the south to join the progressive forces of the west and shake off the shackles of the absentee financial landlords that dwell in New York."

TWO FLYERS KILLED

Plane Shattered in Its Dive of 400 Feet at Santa Monica.

Los Angeles, Dec. 17.—Clover field, Santa Monica, was a field of death for two army aviators, with a crowd of beach sojourners as onlookers. The victims of a nose dive by a Curtiss army plane were: Lieutenant W. D. Fowler and Sergeant Harvey Lightfoot, who was the lieutenant's passenger. Both were alive when spectators rushed up to the plane, shattered in its dive of 400 feet, but both died soon afterward. Fowler was an experienced flyer, having served in the world war, but Lightfoot joined the air reserve two weeks ago. The accident happened when Fowler attempted to make a landing. Trying to glide, he lost control of his speed, according to officers at the field.

Germans Would Emigrate. Berlin, Dec. 17.—The German government has had informally under consideration the propriety and practicability of asking the American government if it would be possible, on grounds of pure humanity, to let down the immigration bars or widen the entrance gateway to the United States for German immigrants. It is estimated that Germany, stripped of its colonies and the homeland made smaller by the Versailles treaty, has 5,000,000 too many, whom it can not feed and for whom there is no steady employment.

SMITH LIKELY TO BE CHOSEN

Insurgents Will Not Permit Selection of Cummins.

MAY BREAK DEADLOCK TODAY

Curtis, Leader of Regular Republicans in the Senate, Declares the Old Guard Will Stick to Cummins to the Last—Democrats to Continue to Vote For Smith, Harrison Says. Situation in Senate.

Washington, Dec. 17.—The fight of the little group of LaFollette insurgents in the senate to force the retirement of Senator Cummins of Iowa from the chairmanship of the interstate commerce committee will be brought to a head soon, it is believed.

At the other end of the capitol the insurgent group, led by Representative John M. Nelson of Wisconsin, consummated their victory over the regular Republicans looking to liberalizing the house rules.

The best bet on the senate situation was that Senator Smith of South Carolina, Democrat and chairman of the interstate commerce committee during the Wilson administration, again would head that committee through a combination of Democratic, insurgent Republican and Farmer-Labor votes.

The insurgent group of live Republicans, Norris, Brookhart, Howell, Ladd and Frazier and the two Farmer-Laborites, Magnus Johnson and Shipstead, hold the key to the situation. They are outspoken in their assertion that they will not permit the election of Cummins to this chairmanship. They unhesitatingly say they will throw their seven votes, and possibly take some others with them, to Smith, to defeat Cummins, if they can not force the Republicans to accept one of their choice, Howell of Nebraska or Couzens of Michigan. One of their group said there would be no long drawn out balloting. There is a feeling in the insurgent ranks that more of the Republicans would be inclined to accept Couzens than Howell.

Senator Curtis, "old guard" leader, reiterated his statement of Saturday that the regulars would stick to Cummins to the last.

The only way to prevent Smith's election is for the Democrats to divide their strength sufficiently to prevent a majority vote. That does not appear likely, even though there was a move in that direction when the last balloting was taken last week, when Senator Bruce of Maryland went over to Cummins to prevent Smith's election. Senator Harrison of Mississippi declared that the Democrats would continue to vote for Smith, and if the insurgents forced his election would accept the responsibility thus thrust upon them.

ELEVEN MEN DROWN.

Lumber Schooner Founding to Pieces Off Oregon Coast.

Coos Bay, Ore., Dec. 17.—Eleven men were drowned and seven others are facing death aboard the schooner C. A. Smith, which is being pounded to pieces at the mouth of Coos bay. Because of high waves the coast guard can not reach the vessel. The vessel is apparently breaking in two. A million and a half feet of lumber is swirling about in the huge seas, smashing against the rigging and the decks, adding a new menace of momentary death.

Ten of the crew perished when they attempted to escape in a lifeboat that was smashed by the waves. One officer of a tug that went to the rescue was washed into the sea, picked up by a coast guard lifeboat and then washed into the sea again and drowned. Captain Blooming is still aboard the wreck.

TACKLES BERNSTEIN

Johnny Dundee Hopes to Win Back His "Pet Title" Tonight.

New York, Dec. 17.—The world's featherweight champion, Johnny Dundee, tackles Jack Bernstein in Madison Square Garden tonight in what is ship, a synthetic thing in a way, which back his "pet title." This is the world's junior lightweight championship, a synthetic thing in a way, which Bernstein won from him last summer. The title, created largely because of Dundee, and first held by him, passed from him in a very bad decision. Bernstein was declared the winner of a scrap that many thought far too close for a title to change hands. Since then, Dundee has won his present crown, decisively beating Eugene Criqui, the brave little French fighter.

REPLIES TO COOLIDGE

Russia Willing to Discuss American Claims in Russia.

Moscow, Dec. 17.—"The soviet government is willing to consider separately the American private claims in Russia and to discuss each, such as the Westinghouse, International Harvester and National City bank, on its own merits," Georges Tchitcherin, foreign minister, made that statement when asked if the soviet government was willing to grant the demands of President Coolidge. M. Tchitcherin continued: "A blanket restitution of property or a reparations pledge is impossible. We made this clear at the Genoa conference." Tchitcherin discussed at length the Russia-American relations, declaring that Russia proved in her note to President Coolidge the desirability of American friendship. He added: "Russian people have no desire to repent for their revolution. Nobody can question our good faith, as all our pledges since the establishment of the soviet government have been carried out."

Escaped Convict Captured.

Wheeling, W. Va., Dec. 17.—Joe Carney, 40, one of four men who escaped from the Ohio penitentiary Sept. 8, after seriously wounding a guard there and scaling the walls, admitted, Chief of Police Frazier says, that he and another man robbed a South Wheeling jewelry store. According to the police, Carney said immediately after the robbery he and his pal divided the loot they obtained and parted.

BACK IN WISCONSIN

Saistad and His "Sunshine" Girl Are Languishing in Jail.

Superior, Wis., Dec. 17.—Edward J. Saistad and his "sunshine" girl are back in Superior. They are in jail. Three years ago the couple fled from Wisconsin in the glow of Saistad's burning summer cottage. He had hoped the wife he deserted would be able to identify the ashes of a corpse he dragged from a grave to the cottage as his remains and collect $65,000 life insurance. "I am glad to be back and face the music after three long, anxious years of a vain search for happiness," Saistad said as he was taken to jail. Saistad and Dorothy Anderson, the "sunshine" girl, were arrested in California 10 days ago. They were brought to Superior by deputies, who had gone to that state for them.

In Their Youth

By MYRA CURTIS LANE

(©, 1923, Western Newspaper Union)

PEGGY'S father was dead. He had been a hale old man, and he had died suddenly, and the shock had momentarily made her forget her quarrel with Will Aston.

Such a foolish quarrel it had been; all about nothing, only they were both very young, and pride was resolute in both of them.

"I shall never speak to you again till you apologize," Peggy had said.

"You needn't trouble to wait," Will had answered. So they had parted, six weeks before, and both had kept their word.

And now Peggy's father was dead, and her mother and she were left alone. She had thought the shock would almost unbalance her mother. The old people had been so dependent on each other. But her mother passed her days in a dull apathy, and she shocked Peggy by her apparent indifference. Peggy could not understand.

Her thoughts were full of the old man, of her days with him. She had adored her father; they had been the best companions. It was incredible that she would never see him again in this life.

Turning over some of the things he had left, his paint-box and canvases, his papers, Peggy came upon a bundle of letters addressed to him. They were in her mother's writing. She hesitated. Then she opened one and began to read.

"It's because I love you, father," she said softly. "I'm not prying; I want you to understand I'm not prying. It's because mother doesn't seem to care, and I want so much to understand you and get into closer touch with you. It isn't prying."

Salving her conscience in this way, Peggy read. Then she read another letter and another. The whole morning went by, and she was still reading.

When lunch time came she hid the letters guiltily, and all that afternoon she read and read until at last she had read the last letter. Then, with a sigh, she folded up the packet and replaced it where she had found it.

"They were sacred letters, never meant for any other eyes; love-letters, and they told her so much that she had never guessed.

So her father and mother, in their youth, had been like her and Will Aston. They had loved fiercely, and they had quarreled fiercely; they had loved and they had hated; they had made up and they had parted forever.

And it all came down to this—the dead man and the apathetic old woman in the house, going about her work as if Peggy's father had never existed.

Peggy had never dreamed that her parents had ever lived and loved and suffered in such a human way as Will and she.

And now her mother didn't care! She went down impulsively to where the old woman was sitting. She kneeled before her. "Mother, didn't you care for father?" she begged.

"Care for him? Why, my dear, we had our little quarrels at first, but afterward we were everything to each other."

"But you—you don't seem to care so much, mother," Peggy ventured.

Her mother smiled. "When you think you care, and aren't sure, you make a dreadful fuss," she said; "but when you really care nothing seems to matter very much, because you just have each other. Some day perhaps you'll understand."

Peggy did understand. But that made it none the less terrible. It was terrible to think of all that love that had gone down the years, dwindled into this quiet old woman sitting in a chair and feeling that she had loved.

And she saw that the priceless gift of youth is never to be repeated. And she knew that, once that youth is let slip, many indeed are the compensations, but just that one thing is taken away forever. That was the error she had fallen into.

She slipped out of the house into the darkening street. She saw Will standing outside, irresolute. She flung herself into his arms.

"Will, forgive me!"

"Forgive me, Peggy. I was trying to get courage to come to you and say that I was wrong."

"Ah, we were both wrong, Will. We were letting our love slip away from us. Don't you see, Will? Let us love each other while we have each other, Will."

And suddenly Peggy realized that her father's death made no difference; in spirit he was still hers.

Self-Protection.

"You admit, then," said the Alabama Judge, "that you stole the hog?"

"Ah sure has to, Judge," said the colored prisoner.

"Well, nigger, there's been a lot of hog-stealing going on around here lately, and I'm just going to make an example of you or none of us will be safe."

Second Thought.

"You say you were not fully quoted in that embarrassing interview?"

"Emphatically," answered Senator Sorghum. "The reporter got only my first thought. After the general comment on the article my second thought was entirely different."

J. F. Alexander, a merchant, was found guilty by a jury at Macon, Ga., on charges of having participated in the fogging of Ollie M. Perry.

Water Power Wasted.
The Alto Parana river, which divides Paraguay from Argentina and Brazil, and its many tributaries, could make Paraguay an important industrial center. The power of these waters is practically unknown, but is estimated as having, in some places, a fall of 200 feet, and a force of 100,000-horse power. The Iguazu falls are regarded as even more powerful than Niagara.

Infalible Method.
An amateur farmer answered an advertisement headed "A Sure Way to Make Hens Lay." This is what he got for his money: "Tie a stout string around the hen's body, place the bird on her side on a board and fasten the string underneath. If it is thought desirable, a pillow may be placed under the hen's head."—Boston Transcript.

GLAND SURGERY TO MAKE SHEEP GROW LONGER WOOL

University Professor Expects Experiments to Succeed.

Philadelphia.—It may be possible to obtain sheep with wool half a yard long by means of gland transplantation, according to Dr. William J. Lentz, professor of anatomy in the University of Pennsylvania veterinary school.
"Of course it's too early to judge whether such results can be obtained by means of gland transplanting in sheep," Doctor Lentz said. "Gland surgery, however, is just in its infancy and it is not possible to predict what wonderful things may be accomplished."
"Heretofore desirable lengths of wool have been attained only by breeding. The method is slow and sheep raisers would welcome any new method to obtain a better product."
The promise of long-wool sheep was made recently by Dr. Serge Voronoff, the "monkey gland" surgeon, who has been conducting a series of new experiments in glandular transplanting. He has requested the central wool committee of France to give him 75 animals to demonstrate the truth of his theory.
Doctor Voronoff says he will transplant the essential glands from 25 of the sheep to the remaining 50. The wool of the latter group will grow longer, he said. When these reproduce, their descendants also will have longer wool, he believes.

Scots Keep Relics of Queen Mary at Home

London.—Scotland has won her fight to keep the intimate relics of Mary, Queen of Scots from going to America or other foreign countries and has succeeded in buying most of them for herself.
The sale was held under exciting circumstances. Scores of patriotic Scotsmen, aroused over the danger of the precious relics forever leaving British soil, crowded into the little room.
A diamond and pearl pendant given to the queen at the time of her marriage to the dauphin of France was the only one of the relics which went to America. The company paid $5,000 for it.
While the entire sale brought $45,000, the Scots committee was more than satisfied, because it obtained those relics which for all Scotsmen have the greatest sentimental value.

Lord's Prayer Saves Girl From Wild Man

Honolulu, T. H.—Barbara Basler, six-year-old daughter of a prominent merchant, owes her escape from a man who kidnaped her to her knowledge of the Lord's prayer.
The child was stolen while playing near her home and taken to the mountain retreat of a man known as "The Wild Man of Nuuanu Valley." The abductor, according to the child, released her when she began saying the Lord's prayer.

Last Note to Friend Halts Man's Suicide

Because he wrote a farewell note to his friend, a policeman, Alexander Jones of Wilkesbarre, Pa., failed in an attempt to commit suicide by leaping into the river.

The Mind of a Woman.
"A woman is more religious than a man," says Dr. A. T. Schofield in "The Mind of a Woman." There is more of the emotional and the mystic. Women, being more emotional than men, are pre-eminent in the spiritual life, for love is their nature more than it is that of men.

Hotel Stenographer

BY ROE FULKERSON

"I am glad I am not hard to look at," said the Hotel Stenographer complacently.

"Where do you get that stuff" laughed the Detective.

"You do not get me, Kelly." The girl spoke placidly. "Your intake is so slow, and you are soon exhausted."

"I was trying to explain to you why I am glad I have not the looks which require me to be clever as well as educated. I like to be easy on the eye, because all good looking girls are subject to temptations and I just dote on temptations."

"A temptation is like a good rule; it works both ways."

"If I get tempted and resist it, I have such a self-satisfied sense of morality and high purpose that I can green myself and be happy for days and days just thinking how much better I am than some girls who would have yielded."

"Then if I do yield to it, I have such a wonderful, good time."

"Last night Jerry McAdoo wanted me to go out in his car for a ride in the country, and Jerry is such a necker I resisted the temptation to go with him and felt mighty good about it. Later Tim Cassidy asked me to go to Reitsville to a dance and I yielded to that temptation and had one of the best times I have had in my life."

"One of the nicest things about being a good looking girl with nice feet and blue eyes and hair that is fastened to your head by its own roots, instead of being anchored on with hairpins, is—"

"Who told you you were pretty?" asked the House Detective.

"Haven't I a pair of pretty and honest blue eyes?"

"Yeah!" said he grudgingly.

"They told me," replied the girl, with finality.

PRESENT AND FUTURE

Your Money Should Be So Deposited That It Will Be Safe Today and Safe Tomorrow.

In the present period of business activity and high prices, it is more necessary than usual to be careful with your money. Five per cent interest is a liberal return where Safety is absolute.

Among the financial institutions of Columbus we are known as a conservative Building and Loan. Charging but 6½% on loans, we, attract a safer class of securities than institutions charging a higher rate. Paying 5% on deposits, we earn a profit which enables us to lay away an adequate Reserve as a further protection to depositors. This Reserve now exceeds $800,000.00.

We propose to continue these policies and upon the basis of Safety we seek your account.

AMUSEMENTS

What are said to be some of the most remarkable night scenes ever filmed will be seen in "The Go-Getter," a Paramount-Cosmopolitan production based on Peter B. Kyne's popular story of the same name, directed by E. H. Griffith, which will be shown at the Metropolitan theater next Monday. These particular scenes in the picture were filmed in Long Island, N. Y., from Mineola to Hicksville, and while they were being "shot" the company worked for three "days" from sunset to sunrise.

One scene in particular is said to be a revelation in photography. This pictures a race at night between an aeroplane and a speeding express train, culminating when the plane forges ahead and lights alongside the railroad tracks several hundred yards in advance of the train. One of the most melodramatic incidents in the picture then takes place as T. Roy Barnes, featured in the picture, flags the oncoming express, which is "shot" while going at the rate of forty miles an hour. The train used in this scene was chartered from the Long Island branch of the Pennsylvania railroad. Three huge motor generating sets were used in the filming of these scenes, which were photographed by Harold Wenstrom.

Seena Owen is featured with Mr. Barnes in "The Go-Getter," as also are William Norris, Tom Lewis and Louis Wolheim. Frederick Stantley, John Carr and Frank Currier are included in an excellent cast.

Breakfast for Doughboys.

The French cooks could never get in line with the American breakfast which was demanded by the American soldiers and others from this country who were called to France during the war. The French breakfast consists of a roll and coffee, while the American demanded eggs and bacon as well.

Curious Name Explained.

The warders of the tower of London were first styled beefeaters in the reign of Edward VI. The word was probably derived from the French buffeter, signifying literally "to eat beef." It was used in connection with the yeomen of the guard, originating at the coronation of Henry VII. in 1485.

MANY ODD NAMESUnkind Parents Responsible for Children's Plight.

Pepper, Lemon, Salt, Nothing and Something, Among Names Found in England.

Naming the baby in most families is, quite properly, a serious affair. No name can be associated with too illustrious a personage of history, too fascinating a character in romance. Nevertheless, it is surprising to what names, and conjunctions of names, reckless or cruelly jocular parents will condemn their children.

English records of recent years reveal that Robert New named his two sons Nothing and Something. Mr. Mixer, Mr. Peel and Mr. Codd named their respective babies Pepper, Lemon and Salt, while Mr. Ware's little girl became China and Mr. Gentile's, Always.

An appeal for legal change of name allowed the general public to learn that the brothers Pig bore the Christian names, Black, Brown, Gay and Guiney. Their request, it is needless to say, was promptly granted.

Practical joking at the expense of helpless infants is unpardonable, but Mr. and Mrs. Million of Oregon could never agree upon names entirely satisfactory to both, so as a matter of convenience, they had resorted to numbers.

The Washington official who relates the story says that when the names of subscribers to a government loan were sent in years ago, one was that of "Ten Million." It was naturally supposed to be an assumed name, and a letter was sent to the address given, rather sharply stating that bonds could be registered in real names only, and that no further attention would be paid to his subscription unless he gave his true name.

An explanatory reply was soon received from Mr. Million, written upon paper bearing the printed letterhead of a firm of Million & Million, reiterating his own name, and adding those of his brothers and sisters, One, Two, Three, Four, Five, Six, Seven (his partner) and the rest.

As the Million children grew up, most of them, he admitted, have modified their numeral prefixes; the Misses One and Three Million, for example, becoming Una and Tria, while Ten himself was commonly known as Tens. Legally, however, his name remained unchanged; and today he is registered as Ten Million, his only rightful name in the eyes of the law. —Kansas City Star.

Chivalry Has Its Limitations.

It is a difficult feat for a henpecked husband to be chivalrous, as a New Rochelle girl is willing to state. She was walking along a road in Residence park the other afternoon. It looked like rain and so she was delighted when a car drew up to the curb and a young married man of her acquaintance invited her to get in and he'd give her a lift to her house.

She accepted with alacrity; but they had gone only a few blocks when he suddenly announced that she would have to get out. Completely mystified, she complied with his strange request; and then she understood.

Advancing from a cross street, but unaware of their presence, was the jealous wife of the would-have-been gallant. —New York Sun and Globe.

Getting in First Licks.

A good many nations have been known to justify their own aggression upon their neighbors much as a little girl named Katherine explained her treatment of her sister Margaret. The quarrel between the two children, says the Argonaut, waxed hot and furious. Katherine hit Margaret with a stick, and then their father interfered.

"Katherine," he said, "did you hit Margaret with that stick?"

Katherine defiantly confessed her guilt.

"Why did you do it?" demanded the father.

"Because," Katherine retorted, and righteous indignation flashed in her eyes, "afterwards she hit me!" —Youth's Companion.

Certainly a Sad Story.

This is rather a sad story, so let my gentle reader prepare to shed a silent tear. Even those who do not come under the category of "gentle" may well pause awhile and wonder on the moral.

It concerns two boxers who, after waiting months for a fight that would bring them into the limelight, each got his chance and each got beaten. After their fights they compared notes.

"Run thing," said one, "I got a bout, and now I'm blessed if I can get about!"

"Same here," nodded the other, gloomily. "I got a round, and now, dash me, if I think I'll ever be able to get around again!"

Progression.

"Why is it that the more you have the more you want?"

"I don't know," replied Mr. Dustin Stax, "unless it's because you feel you've got to keep the profits progressing in order to keep up with the income tax." —Washington Star.

Unique.

Kenilworth—Why in the name of heavens does he ride in such a rattle-trap of a machine?

Glencoe—Claims the sound of the machine drowns out his wife's talking.

Drawing the Line.

An actress, who had retired from the stage and bought a little house in the country, decided to start a chicken farm.

Accordingly, acting on the principle that all big businesses have small beginnings, she bought a hen and a setting of thirteen eggs.

As she had no knowledge of poultry at all, she wrote to a poultry journal, asking how long the eggs would take to hatch out. The paper replied:

"Three weeks for chickens and four for ducks."

Some weeks later she wrote again to the paper:

"Many thanks for your advice. However, at the end of three weeks there were no chickens hatched out, and, as I did not want ducks, I took the hen off!" —Poultry Journal.

Mrs. Mary Brunin is under arrest at Detroit in connection with the killing of Lawrence Reaume, 31, who was shot to death. It is alleged Reaume annoyed the woman with his intentions.

Early Rubber Goods Imperfect.

Many were the troubles that early manufacturers of rubber goods experienced on account of the propensity of rubber to expand or contract with the heat. Daniel Webster, who was Mr. Goodyear's counsel in his patent litigation, humorously referred to a fine cloak of India rubber he once owned, stating that in cold weather it stood well by itself, and that he often set it out on the porch surmounted by his hat, many persons passing by mistaking it for the Sage of Marshfield himself.

THIS, TOO, WILL PASS

Fading, slowly fading, like the slowly fading sun.
Going, slowly going, on the journey now begun.
Dying, slowly dying, slowly passing from the fun.
Like the passing of the flowers, dropping petals one by one.

Sobbing, sadly sobbing for the things in life undone.
Crying, softly crying—for of pleasure there is none.
Waiting, always waiting, till the weary race is run.
Till at last the trial is over and the victory lost or won.

Oh, the light of hope is fading, and the bloom of life is gone.
All is dying, slowly dying, as the days go drifting on.
And in sorrow I am turning to the land that lies beyond.
While I'm waiting, praying, fearing, for the coming of the dawn.
—Frank Kenneth Young.

ORIGIN OF THE ROSICRUCIANS

Secret Fraternity Was Founded During the Latter Part of the Fourteenth Century.

A secret fraternity alleged to have been founded during the latter part of the fourteenth century by Christian Rosenkreuz, a German mystic, who dwelt for a time in India and Egypt, where he acquired a profound knowledge of the occult arts. The Rosicrucians, like the alchemists, pretended to transmute metals, to prolong life, and to possess knowledge of what was occurring in distant places. They first became known to the world early in the Seventeenth century through the publication of certain documents said to have been issued by them; but, according to many authorities, their existence was extremely doubtful. The Rosicrucians were also called the Brothers of the Rosy Cross, from the notion that the name is derived from crux (cross) and rosa (rose).

Brewer, however, says that the word Rosicrucian comes from ros (dew) and rosa (rose).
"Dew was considered by the ancient chemists as the most powerful solvent of gold, and cross in alchemy is the synonym of light, because any figure of the cross contains the three letters L, X, V (light)."—Brewer's Dictionary of Phrases and Fable.

Thousand Languages at Least.

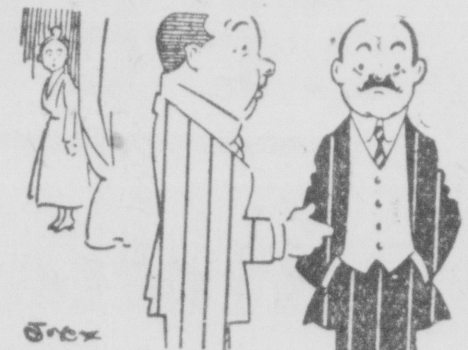

Every six weeks the American Bible society publishes some form of the Scriptures in a new language. In the spring of this year the society issued a little one-leaf pamphlet entitled "Every Man in His Own Tongue," which created unexpected interest. It listed the 770 different languages in which the Scriptures in their entirety or in part has been published by the society. The list should include 1,000 different languages, authorities at the Bible house say, and already they have added half a dozen to the number. The society claims that there are nearly 300 more languages spoken by a group of people sufficiently large to warrant publishing the Scriptures for them.

A-Shopping in Wheelbarrow.

Wheelbarrows are the principal means of freight and passenger traffic in Tsinanfu, a walled city of 300,000 inhabitants at the land end of the Shantung railway in China. Nearly all the freight is moved in this manner, some of the loads being conveyed distances of fifteen to twenty miles a day. "Milady" frequently returns from her shopping tours with her bundles on one side of the wheelbarrow while she herself rides on the other side. Half a dozen persons may ride in front of a puffing and perspiring coolie. The wheel is in the center of the barrow, which aids in balancing the load. If it is unusually heavy, another man or boy helps to pull by means of a rope or strap thrown across his shoulders. In a few instances a mule is the assistant, but it requires a man to lead the mule.

Too Much Argument.

Two drovers were sitting in the inn of an English village. They had been sitting there for nearly an hour, and so far neither had spoken. At last one of them opened his mouth. "Didst see old brown cow on th' moor?" he asked. Another half-hour elapsed. Then the second drover spoke. "It wasn't brown cow," he said. "Twas brown bull." Silence again for another half hour. The first man rose and made for the door. "Going?" queried the other. "Aye," came the reply. "Far too much argument here for me."

THE USUAL WAY.

"I suppose you and your wife share everything?"
"Not at all. She insists that I have all the faults."

CATTLE EAT DEAD FOR PHOSPHORUS THEY CRAVE

Element Lacking in Regular Food in South African Districts.

New York.—Cattle so crave a certain substance which is lacking from their food in some districts in South Africa that they eagerly search for the bodies of dead animals and greedily devour their bones, even though the flesh still clings to the skeletons and even though the dead animal be one of their own mates. Such is the statement of Dr. H. H. Green of the division of veterinary research at Pretoria, South Africa, in a recent report on this strange condition made to the American Society of Biological Chemists.

Osteophagia, as this bone-eating habit of the cattle is termed, results directly from a lack of efficient phosphorus in the food adequately to supply the body; the low content of this element in the food can be traced to the very small amount of it in the soil. The animals have learned that bones are a very rich source of the substance they crave, since the skeleton is made up almost entirely of calcium phosphate and they satisfy their desire for phosphates just as many animals gratify their appetite for salt at salt licks.

Acute osteophagia occurs in almost all the animals in certain regions for about ten months in the year, according to Doctor Green, and only abates for about two months while the grass is very young. This disease can be prevented, experiments proved, by the use of phosphate manuring in the soil or by the administration of phosphate to the animals affected, but in the latter case it reappears again when this substance is removed from the diet.

According to this scientist, osteophagia in itself does not usually result fatally, although it may affect the growth of young cattle or lessen the production of milk in cows, results which are also attributable to the low phosphate content of the food. Its economic importance lies in the fact that it is indirectly the cause of a fatal bovine disease, common in South Africa, which is known as lamziekte. This latter disease, characterized by a paralysis of the throat and neck muscles, lameness and a humping of the back, is caused by a toxin produced by microorganisms harbored in decaying flesh. The bone-eating animals in their attempt to gratify the desire for phosphate eat bones together with adhering putrid flesh; this flesh too often contains the toxin which causes lamziekte.

Lonely Islanders Look in Doubt at Wireless

St. Kilda, Outer Hebrides.—Although cut off from civilization since last August, for no steamer is able to fight its way through the storm and fog during the autumn and winter months, 75 lonely inhabitants of this island look askance at the telegraph and will not use the wireless station which was built here during the war by the British.

Recently a steamer sailed from the island of Lewis, the largest and most northerly of the Hebrides group, and thus broke St. Kilda's nine months' solitude by bringing it mails, provisions and other necessities.

During their isolated months the islanders send their letters to Lewis in tin canisters in sheepskin buoys. They launch these when there is a gale of northwest wind. Sometimes the buoys get blown out of their course and take the letters thousands of miles, but very often they cross the sixty-mile stretch of sea to Lewis island safely and are then posted from that place.

Letting George Do It.

The fence in front of the farmhouse was badly damaged, and it seemed to sensitive Mrs. Dalrybutter, the farmer's wife, that all the neighbors were remarking about it as they passed by. "When are you going to get that fence in the front mended?" she asked her husband.

"Oh, next week!" was the reply. "I'm just waiting for George to come home from college."

"But whatever will the boy know about mending a fence?" she asked in astonishment.

"Well, replied the farmer, 'he ought to know a lot. He wrote and told me the other day that he had been taking a lot of fencing lessons this term.'—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

The Rough Diamond.

A story about Mrs. Barton French, the autocratic society leader of New York, comes from the Riviera.

A multimillionaire succeeded in getting himself presented to Mrs. French one day at Ciro's in Monte Carlo, but she never recognized him thereafter. This annoyed the multimillionaire very much, and he got a young lady to intercede for him.

"Really, Mrs. French"—thus ran the young lady's intercession—"the man is really not such a bad sort. A diamond in the rough, you know."

"Yes, I know," said Mrs. French. "That's why I'm cutting him."

Gorgeous Note in Chic New Clothes

Wool Materials and Velvets Among Rich Fabrics for Gala Days.

The season will be one of great importance to the creators and the wearers of smart clothes. With the assurance that society is to spend the winter merrily, even brilliantly, there is answer to the demand for an appropriate wardrobe, writes a fashion correspondent in the New York Times.

The prelude to the season was played this summer by the Americans abroad, during those weeks when Paris was a veritable storm center for the beau monde and its activities. The impetus came from within the gayest inner circle of the American colony at the French capital, and the most marvelous creations were flashed before an appraising public at the various gala affairs, the Grand Prix, the Ball, at Deauville. On all of these occasions the American women who carried long purses to the other side set a plunging pace and opened for Paris artists a vista of greater prosperity than they have known for many a year.

The London drawing room, at which such an unusually large number of Americans were presented this year, and the court functions are said to have made an interesting study in contrasts. It was the reverse side of the picture of former times, when a presentation gown was the envy and dream of American womankind, who followed with reverent steps the styles worn by the great ladies of Europe. Now it is the American woman whose beauty and dash spur the fancy of foreign modistes and cause the haut monde to "sit up and take notice." At this last drawing room and the court ball some of the toilets worn by Americans were magnificent.

The new woollens of which the snappy sports outfits are built are extremely English in character this season, rich in texture and warm in color tones. The neutral shades, browns and tans and taupe, are now quite superseded by brighter colors and more delicate shades which are being shown with a great variety of mixtures. Tan has become a creamy beige, gray is less cold and browns are russet and glowing. Delightful greens are used for some of these sports suits.

For Outdoor Wear.

One especially chic suit is made of a wool material in which the threads of sage green and soft pastel green are interwoven with yellow in wide stripes. The skirt of this suit is severely plain, straight and narrow, and is ankle length. The little box coat is closed with a single row of green bone buttons to the neck and fluffy orange fox forms the high collar, cuffs and a wide band straight around the bottom. As is common in many of the new sports suits, a practical pocket is concealed in each side of the jacket, under the fur. Heavy yellow doeskin gauntlets and shoes are worn with this outfit, and the hat is a small yellow felt with slightly rolling brim, having a scarf of green silk wound tight around the crown.

Some very attractive suits and wraps for the out-of-door games are made of large plaids that are now so popular and for which they are charmingly adapted. These are, of course, so flashy in themselves that not a stitch of trimming is required—on some scarcely a button is in evidence—but the use of fur is universal.

The sports coats grow more and more conspicuously smart. They are square and straight, or flaring, or wrap around, and the materials are highly appealing—downy, deep piled and light, in all the new autumn shades. Sports coats are quite different from the usual wrap for street wear, in which some of the most attractive models are tiered, and others are cut with a flaring bias flounce that is proving to be very well liked. They are made of the smoother, finer woven fabrics, mostly in plain colors, and cling close to the figure. These are the coats that will be worn equally with fur wraps for out-of-town weddings and dressy daytime occasions, town or country, and are especially suitable for the horse show, for which a more tailleur style is now correct.

This is a season of imported materials. The demand for rich fabrics has inspired every branch of dress goods manufacture, and the market is now stocked high with gorgeous weaves of wool, fine and coarse; of silks, brocades and velvets—particularly velvets.

Hundreds of yards of gold brocade, silver brocade, of metal combined with silk, luscious velvets, in superb patterns, and as many yards more in plain cloth of gold and silver, make a truly amazing illustration of the extravagance of the present-day standards.

Next in prominence to the handsome brocades of metal and silk are the velvets in every lovely color. Of these,

Paris Gown of Satin, So Heavy With Pearls and Brilliants That Two Straps Are Required to Carry Its Weight.

Salome velvet is the edition de luxe, with a sheen and fineness that is exquisite to the touch and the eye. It is literally the rage for softly draped gowns for afternoon and evening wear. This most delicious phase of velvet is being used with a greater success for the most elaborate dinner and ball gown. At a private exhibition of advance models in one of the most exclusive houses in New York were shown some gowns of rare distinction, of which black and colored velvets were the basis.

Winsome Draped Models.

In the draped, slender style an evening gown of apple-green Salome velvet was drawn lightly about the figure—just one piece, it appeared to be—in graceful lines, caught at one side with a huge ornament of brilliants and green stones. One corner of the drapery was left long and trailing, giving to the gown the appearance of having a train, though the regular separate train is now quite passe.

The neck of this dress was cut conservatively decollete in the V shape, that is ever flattering, and quite low in the back. The velvet fell softly, very long about the feet at one side and was slightly shorter at the other side. Ruby, jade, apple green, marigold, apricot, hydrangea, ivory and, most chic of all, black velvet, are used for the most costly gowns done by leading designers for evening gowns, in which the velvet is combined with metal and silver flowers.

Black fur is a striking note in a number of white and light-colored gowns, baby fox being the most delicate among the many varieties shown. Lavin has evolved one of the most distinguished models of the season. It is a dancing frock of fantastic type. Visualized, it has a spreading birdtail suggestion made of goosehair. The foundation is of white satin over which the overgrown is built. Circular flounces of tulle in the most lovely shades of violet, hydrangea blue, orange and green are gathered full upon a fan-shaped skirt that is narrow in the front, beginning at the waistline and falling away in widening lines toward the middle of the gown, sweeping the floor.

Black Gaining Favor.

Black, in fact, is gaining in favor, as the rather bewildering array of colors is presented, and now that velvet is so fashionable, it is employed in the most striking creations. It is found to be so complimentary that most smartly gowned women are investing rather heavily in black gowns, wraps and millinery.

Another novelty in composition is of black velvet, and also has a deep flounce of the same material about the skirt, shortened in front and caught with enormous flat, conventionalized scarlet poppies. One of these flowers almost covers the front of the bodice, and two others are sewn in regular spaces down the front of the dress. A jeweled band trimming passes over the shoulders for supporting straps and is looped in long strands under the arms at each side of the figure. The long, loose bodice is open at each side, showing a tightly drawn slip of white satin, and a combination of black, scarlet and white is startling in the extreme.

DIVORCE EASY FOR INDIANS

Separation of Married Couple Constituted a Legal Divorce—Upheld by Commissioner.

In the period that the Indians lived as tribal peoples, following their own marriage customs, a separation of a married couple constituted a legal divorce. This is the decision just handed down by Charles H. Burke, Indian commissioner, and is considered as one of great importance that will be followed many times, no doubt, in determining heirship cases among the Poncas, Otoes and other tribes.

The decision came in determining heirs of Chief Little Soldier, who for a long time was prominent in the Ponca tribe. In Nebraska, prior to the tribe coming to their present Oklahoma homes, Little Soldier had taken two sisters as wives, Ella Little Soldier and Henrietta First Moon. The latter retained her maiden name in order to distinguish herself from her sister, Indian custom permitted Little Soldier to have plural wives.

When a congressional act of March 12, 1897, directed each Ponca possessing more than one wife to pick out his favorite and thus divorce the other, Little Soldier failed to do so. Evidently he liked both sisters too well to choose between them.

The investigation to determine the heirs of Little Soldier started last December before George Hoyo, the superintendent for the Poncas and affiliated tribes, and the findings were sent by him to Commissioner Burke. All the principal figures in the marital mixup now are dead excepting Henrietta First Moon. She claimed the estate as having been his Indian custom wife, whereas Starling White Tail contested her as the son of Alice Eagle White Tail.—Kansas City Star.

The American Way.

"In England they run horse races the other way around the track," says the Howard Courant. "But don't laugh at it. That was the old way before America got in. We were the folks who changed the style. Who remembers how the Romans used to run the chariot races? They raced on round tracks before the British did. The famous picture of Ben Hur's chariot race shows him going around the American way."

Force of Habit.

An Angeleno recently returned from Europe laughingly tells of meeting an old friend of his in Venice, Italy, who has a studio in California at Carmel-by-the-Sea. He asked the artist which of the two places he liked the best.

"Well," replied the artist, "I like them both, but Venice is awfully tough on my cat."

"I don't get you," said the Angeleno, "what difference does it make to the cat whether it's in Carmel or Venice?"

"Well, it's this way," explained the artist. "I've got the habit of tossing the cat out the window into the back yard every night, and of course here in Venice there isn't any back yard."

Potato Brown-Rot Is Cause of Big Losses

Bacterial Disease Occurs Especially on New Land.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Potato brown-rot, a bacterial disease which not only attacks potatoes, but also eggplant, pepper, tomato, tobacco, Jimson weed, black nightshade, peanut, and other plants, is destructive to plants in the field and to the tubers after they have been harvested, according to Department Circular 281, "Potato Brown-Rot," by F. C. Meler and G. K. K. Link, recently published by the United States Department of Agriculture to provide information on the prevention of losses in shipping and marketing the potato crop. This disease is world-wide in tropical countries and occurs especially on low land. The trouble begins in the field through infection from the soil or from leaf-eating insects. The plants wilt and die. The tubers show a ring browning, especially at the stem end, and decay rapidly. Other cut, bruised, or injured potatoes in the same package become infected by contact.

Field control is not understood. Further experiments are needed, but losses in shipping are lessened by early harvesting of diseased fields, through sorting, and immediate use. Decay in transit or storage is lessened if the potatoes can be held at a temperature below 55 degrees.

Copies of the circular may be had by addressing the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Destroying Foulbrood in Season Favoring Malady

The way to handle American foulbrood in a season when conditions are favorable for the spread of the disease is to kill the bees after dark with sulphur or a pint of gasoline. This is the advice of C. O. Yost, secretary of the Indiana Bee Keepers' association. He suggests several plans. Says he:

"Stop the entrance tight, carry the hive inside a bee-tight enclosure, there destroy combs, etc., and scorch fixtures thoroughly. Another plan: Do all the treating under a light screen tent that may be carried around and set over the colony to be handled. Another plan: Take a sick colony a couple of miles from any bees, treat there, allow them to quiet down and move home. If gasoline is used the entrance should first be closed. Raise the hive cover and with a little smoke chase all bees down from top bar, then empty the pint of gasoline around top of frames, close hive cover tight. The hive and dead bees may be taken inside and the usual methods of cleaning, etc., carried out.

Care for Chicken House Is of Great Importance

The poultry house should be littered at all times with straw eight to twelve inches deep. This should be renewed whenever it becomes damp, badly broken up or so full of droppings that grains thrown down are not quickly lost from sight.

Where a dropping board is used it should be cleaned frequently (once a week is satisfactory), because disease germs and mites accumulate here. If not removed, the feet of the birds also become very foul, causing a large percentage of dirty eggs.

As a matter of precaution against disease the poultry house should be thoroughly cleaned and then soaked in every part with a 3 per cent solution of a good stock dip once every year.

Fresh Corn Stover Most Palatable to Live Stock

Fresh corn stover is palatable, but after it has been exposed to the weather for a few months it loses much of its palatability and should not be depended upon to supply very much, if any, nutrients to the cow. It is better when the stover is needed as a feed to ensile it, for in the silo it will keep more palatable, a larger portion of it will be consumed, and better results will be obtained by feeding it. Corn stover should be looked upon as a reasonably good, dry carbonaceous feed, but should be fed in limited quantities because of its low protein content.

Profit in Sweet Clover to Every Owner of Bees

In the bee business there is no profit in box-hives or "gums"; nor in shiftlessness; nor in cultivating honey plants just for bees. However, the sweet clovers, both white and yellow, and others, grown also for soiling crops or forage will pay you well. Sweet clover along railroads, bankings, ditch lines, fence rows and the like will not prove a weed but a profit to every farmer having bees.

Multiplication Table Is Still Handy for Farmer

The farmer still has use for the multiplication table, despite the ups and downs in the agricultural situation, according to some figures just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. For example, the output of skim milk powder has doubled in the last five years; the number of cow-testing associations has been doubled in the last six years; the quantity of ice cream produced has doubled in the last 12 years.

To Make Mirror Brilliant.

To clean a mirror in such a way as to bring it to the highest state of brilliancy, very fine whiting, or, better, precipitated chalk, is one of the best-known agents. The mirror should be rubbed gently with methylated spirits with a soft, clean sponge, and then dusted with the whiting or chalk. After a moment it should be wiped with a dry cloth. Another softer cloth, or, more effectively, a silk handkerchief, should be used for the final polishing, which should leave the glass clear and brilliant.

Proper Food for Parrot.

Parrots in the wild state live on seed and fruit, and should, while in captivity, be fed as nearly as possible the same kind of food. They should be fed sunflower seed, hemp seed, boiled yellow corn, stale bread soaked in water, an occasional piece of apple or banana, roasted peanuts, dry crackers. Plenty of water and gravel should be kept in the cage. The parrot's cage should be cleaned every day.

Vera Cruz.

Vera Cruz has the unique record of having been twice captured by American forces, once in 1846 when we were at war with Mexico, and again in 1917, when we were not at war with Mexico. However, all we seem to do with it after we get it is to give it back again, so its citizens probably feel little worried at the vicissitudes of war. Indeed, they have recently raised a statue in honor of the noble defenders of Vera Cruz against the gringos, which shows that they feel they are adequately protected.

MORE GOOD WORK

Being Accomplished By Rotarians, Shown In Cuts In Article Below.

The good work of the Rotarians teen and Marie fourteen, when the still continues, as is shown in the county nurse found them in school pictures, those of brother and sister. Only about six months elapsed between Raymond and Marie Redland, between the pictures, "before and after." O. Raymond was seven-

Self Control.

"How happy is he, born or taught, Whose passions not his master are; Lord of himself, tho' not of lands, And having nothing, yet hath all!"

Parents must work out the welfare of their children. The church and the school may contribute something towards the child's development but upon the parent rests the great responsibility.

The school holds the child but a few hours each day and under circumstances which prohibit individual training.

How then may the parent set about giving their children a training resulting in a life for which they will be grateful and at the same time win for themselves, as parents, respect and love?

Certainly not by giving the child his own way in everything; buying him everything he sees; yielding to his every whim even to allowing him to leave off braces, casts, jackets, etc. Such treatment will only make the child a domineering, selfish, unhappy, and perhaps more crippled man or woman.

There is no influence that will affect the child as the home environment. Therefore let the home atmosphere be one of cheerfulness, fairness and confidence.

You wonder why your child is selfish. It depends upon the way the child is handled as to whether he is selfish or unselfish. The crippled child has suffered so much that we get into the habit of doing everything for him and listening to demands that grow more and more unreasonable, resulting in an uncontrolled selfishness. This allowed to go unchecked can only result in great unhappiness for both child and parent.

The child soon demands that we go out of our way to do unreasonable things. Is it right for us to encourage such a spirit? On the contrary, to cater to his every wish is doing the child an injustice.

Proper actions in a child must be based upon confidence. Parents must appreciate this simple fact and appeal to the child's mind and heart. Firmly and in all kindness lead the child to see that there are others who must also be considered and that it is not right for him to have more than his share of the privileges.

Make the child have a good time helping you do things for others and the spirit of unselfishness will be developed in a positive way. Look carefully for small instances of generosity and happily show your approval. Make frequent use of the positive suggestion that your child is generous and encourage and praise him for every effort in the right direction.

Plan each day to share more fully the life of your child. Above all let him realize that you are his friend and that you are both working together for the good of others. In the making of some one else happy he finds happiness himself.—Smiles.

NATION BETWEEN MANY FIRES

Divers Factions in Mexico Arm and Take the Field.

ALL AGAINST THE GOVERNMENT

General Calles, in Charge of All the Armies of the Republic, Calls Upon Farmers and Workers to Support the Obregon Regime—Villa's Brother's Forces Would Carry Out Former Bandit's Platform.

Laredo, Tex., Dec. 17.—Mexico is not only between two, but many, fires. General Plutarco Elias Calles has been appointed chief of all the armies of the republic by President Alvaro Obregon, and Calles has issued a manifesto calling upon the farmers and working classes to support the government against the reactionaries. In discussing his proposed manifesto, General Calles said: "It is very easy for me to start the ball rolling in a class war, but how will I stop it once it gets started?"

Besides the rebel forces under the De la Huerta banner seeking to overthrow the Obregon regime, General Angel Flores, until recently a candidate for the presidency, may take the field within a few days against both the government and the rebels, he having the support of the aristocratic element, which are against the division of their huge estates under the agrarian system.

Authentic information brings to light the fact that Raul Madero, brother of the deceased president of that name, has taken the field against the central government and is now organizing and equipping forces in the extreme southern end of the state of Chihuahua and throughout the state of Durango. Raul Madero's expedition is against the government, the rebels and the Flores faction.

In addition to this Hipolito Villa, brother of the former bandit chief, is now at Canutillo, in the state of Chihuahua, where he has forces ready to try to carry out his dead brother's platform for enforcement of the constitution of 1857 as against the constitution of 1917, and in addition making all native born citizens of Mexico free and equal, and forever abolishing the present system of holding peons in slavery.

President Obregon will personally command the federal forces, which are preparing to vigorously attack the rebels now holding the city of Puebla, according to an announcement in federal sources.

Although first announcements indicate that the federals would evacuate Puebla as part of the plans to draw the revolutionaries out on the mesa, the present reversal of that program indicates a new determination to halt the apparently uninterrupted march of the rebels on Mexico City. The government, it is declared, will fight to the last ditch to hold the seat of government.

General Luis Caballero and Alfred Ricaut have arrived at Tampico. Telegraphic announcement from Mexico City states that General Plutarco Calles is en route to Tampico for the purpose of recruiting forces from the farmers and laboring classes for the federal army to prevent invasion of the state of Tamaulipas by the rebels.

General Enrique Estrada, chief of the revolutionary forces in the Guadalupe district, with three battalions, four regiments and 10 airplanes, is now advancing on the Obregon forces in that region. In the state of Colima the Obregon government, headed by Huertado Flores, has been overthrown, the military forces joining the Huerta movement.

Wage Cuts Announced.
Berlin, Dec. 17.—The German government's Christmas present to approximately 400,000 civil service and other national, state and municipal employees is a notice of impending dismissal to take place within three months. The second sack of the German government Santa Claus is a "happy New Year" for thousands more in the form of notices that cuts of 40 per cent will be made in wages under the pre-war standard. This means literal starvation, as the cost of living is two and a half times greater than before the war. To all protests the government replies in effect that if the state is to live the individual must be sacrificed.

Assistant Attorney General.
Washington, Dec. 17.—Earl J. Davis of Michigan was nominated by President Coolidge to be assistant attorney general, succeeding John W. H. Kim, who recently resigned.

FRANK HAMPTON

Secretary to Senator Simmons of North Carolina.

According to reports in Washington Hampton is to have charge of the campaign of William G. McAdoo.

WANTS ACTION RESCINDED

Supporter of Johnson Goes After Republican National Committee.

Washington, Dec. 17.—Supporters of Senator Hiram Johnson declared here they would carry to the Republican national convention the fight against "packing" the floor with hand-picked southern delegations. In a statement issued by Representative Louis C. Cramton of Michigan, one of Senator Johnson's backers, he calls on the national committee to rescind its action of last week. Dr. Cramton assails as "unfair, unwise and unlawful" the decision last week by the committee in giving increased representation to southern delegations in the face of the expressed wishes to be contrary of the 1920 convention. Disaster in the 1924 election, he predicts, will be certain to follow any nomination brought about by handing over to southern delegations the balance of power in the convention.

STINNES' AMBITION RECEIVES SETBACK

German Government Not to Sell Nation's Railways.

Berlin, Dec. 17.—The bold dash of German industrial captains, led by Hugo Stinnes and associates, backed up by the farmers and junker agrarians, to get possession of Germany's vast network of governmentally owned railways, has received a temporary setback.

Stinnes and his associates, together with the farmers and junkers, sought to take advantage of the present critical financial situation to force the government to sell the railways to a private corporation organized by themselves.

In the effort to circumvent this move, Minister of Railways Oeser submitted to the cabinet a law severing the railway system from the national budget and placing it on its own financial footing, but without giving up government ownership and control. To help make revenue and expenditures meet it is proposed to dismiss 25 per cent of all employees. The Stinnes plan for the private operation of the railways has been rejected in the cabinet, particularly by Stresemann, who appears to have completely broken with Stinnes.

Friends of Stinnes say that the movement to sever the railways from the budgetary system is a step in the direction of private operation. Stinnes is keeping up a campaign for private ownership as the only solution of the railways situation.

Dr. Parks Defies Bishops.

New York, Dec. 17.—The threat of revolution in the Protestant Episcopal church became more ominous than ever when Dr. Leighton Parks, rector of St. Bartholomew's church, came out flatly against the Virgin birth and bodily resurrection and threw down a gauge of defiance to the "autocracy of bishops." The venerable doctor, who is 71 years old, told his congregation that he would welcome a trial for heresy.

WHEELER SCENTS THIRD PARTY

Urges Progressive Democrats to Forsake "Reactionaries."

ASKS FOR A NEW ALIGNMENT

Junior Senator From Montana Would Have Progressive Forces of the South Join With the Progressives of the West and "Shake Off the Shackles of the Absentee Financial Landlords of New York."

Washington, Dec. 17.—The junior senator from Montana, Burton K. Wheeler, Democrat, called upon the progressive members of his party in the senate to forsake their reactionary leaders and stand forth in the name of the common people.

He predicted that perseverance in the path the party is now walking in will compel the formation of a third party and the wiping of the old parties from the political map next November.

Senator Wheeler was elected to the present congress on the Democratic ticket as a "progressive." Only a few days of his first term in congress had passed when, having notified his party leaders in the senate that the only assignment he cared to have and proposed to have was membership on the interstate commerce committee, he forced them to give it to him, and immediately went into action to prevent Senator Cummins of Iowa retaining the chairmanship of that committee. Senator Wheeler said:

"The people of this country are now divided into two great camps politically—progressives and reactionaries—those who believe we should change our laws to meet new conditions, and those who believe the laws made by our forefathers should be left as they were many years ago."

"The people are likewise divided into two great groups economically, those who produce and those who produce nothing. All those who are affected in the same manner economically should be in the same group politically; but today we find just the reverse to be true. In other words, we find progressives and reactionaries in the Republican party and reactionaries and progressives in the Democratic party."

"There should be a new alignment of parties. Either those progressives in the Republican party must control the destinies of that party and the progressives of the country support them, or they should join the progressive forces of the Democratic party and help to make it more responsive to the needs of the people."

"Economic changes have greatly modified the old alignment. The west no longer clings to the apron strings of the east. The economic interests of the west and the south are similar. The only hope of the country is for the progressive forces of the south to join the progressive forces of the west and shake off the shackles of the absentee financial landlords that dwell in New York."

TWO FLYERS KILLED

Plane Shattered in Its Dive of 400 Feet at Santa Monica.

Los Angeles, Dec. 17.—Clover field, Santa Monica, was a field of death for two army aviators, with a crowd of beach sojourners as onlookers. The victims of a nose dive by a Curtiss army plane were: Lieutenant W. D. Fowler and Sergeant Harvey Lightfoot, who was the lieutenant's passenger. Both were alive when spectators rushed up to the plane, shattered in its dive of 400 feet, but both died soon afterward. Fowler was an experienced flyer, having served in the world war, but Lightfoot joined the air reserve two weeks ago. The accident happened when Fowler attempted to make a landing. Trying to glide, he lost control of his speed, according to officers at the field.

Germans Would Emigrate.

Berlin, Dec. 17.—The German government has had informally under consideration the propriety and practicability of asking the American government if it would be possible, on grounds of pure humanity, to let down the immigration bars or widen the entrance gateway to the United States for German immigrants. It is estimated that Germany, stripped of its colonies and the homeland made smaller by the Versailles treaty, has 5,000,000 people too many, whom it can not feed and for whom there is no steady employment.

SMITH LIKELY TO BE CHOSEN

Insurgents Will Not Permit Selection of Cummins.

MAY BREAK DEADLOCK TODAY

Curtis, Leader of Regular Republicans in the Senate, Declares the Old Guard Will Stick to Cummins to the Last—Democrats to Continue to Vote For Smith, Harrison Says. Situation in Senate.

Washington, Dec. 17.—The fight of the little group of LaFollette insurgents in the senate to force the retirement of Senator Cummins of Iowa from the chairmanship of the interstate commerce committee will be brought to a head soon, it is believed.

At the other end of the capitol the insurgent group, led by Representative John M. Nelson of Wisconsin, consummated their victory over the regular Republicans looking to liberalizing the house rules.

The best bet on the senate situation was that Senator Smith of South Carolina, Democrat and chairman of the interstate commerce committee during the Wilson administration, again would head that committee through a combination of Democratic, insurgent Republican and Farmer-Labor votes.

The insurgent group of live Republicans, Norris, Brookhart, Howell, Ladd and Frazier and the two Farmer-Laborites, Magnus Johnson and Shipstead, hold the key to the situation. They are outspoken in their assertion that they will not permit the election of Cummins to this chairmanship. They unhesitatingly say they will throw their seven votes, and possibly take some others with them, to Smith, to defeat Cummins, if they can not force the Republicans to accept one of their choice, Howell of Nebraska or Couzens of Michigan. One of their group said there would be no long drawn out balloting. There is a feeling in the insurgent ranks that more of the Republicans would be inclined to accept Couzens than Howell.

Senator Curtis, "old guard" leader, reiterated his statement of Saturday that the regulars would stick to Cummins to the last.

The only way to prevent Smith's election is for the Democrats to divide their strength sufficiently to prevent a majority vote. That does not appear likely, even though there was a move in that direction when the last balloting was taken last week, when Senator Bruce of Maryland went over to Cummins to prevent Smith's election. Senator Harrison of Mississippi declared that the Democrats would continue to vote for Smith, and if the insurgents forced his election would accept the responsibility thus thrust upon them.

ELEVEN MEN DROWN.

Lumber Schooner Founding to Pieces Off Oregon Coast.

Coos Bay, Ore., Dec. 17.—Eleven men were drowned and seven others are facing death aboard the schooner C. A. Smith, which is being pounded to pieces at the mouth of Coos bay. Because of high waves the coast guard can not reach the vessel. The vessel is apparently breaking in two. A million and a half feet of lumber is swirling about in the huge seas, smashing against the rigging and the decks, adding a new menace of momentary death.

Ten of the crew perished when they attempted to escape in a lifeboat that was smashed by the waves. One officer of a tug that went to the rescue was washed into the sea, picked up by a coast guard lifeboat and then washed into the sea again and drowned. Captain Blooming is still aboard the wreck.

TACKLES BERNSTEIN

Johnny Dundee Hopes to Win Back His "Pet Title" Tonight.

New York, Dec. 17.—The world's featherweight champion, Johnny Dundee, tackles Jack Bernstein in Madison Square Garden tonight in what is ship, a synthetic thing in a way, which back his "pet title." This is the world's junior lightweight championship, a synthetic thing in a way, which Bernstein won from him last summer. The title, created largely because of Dundee, and first held by him, passed from him in a very bad decision. Bernstein was declared the winner of a scrap that many thought far too close for a title to change hands. Since then, Dundee has won his present crown, decisively beating Eugene Criqui, the brave little French fighter.

REPLIES TO COOLIDGE

Russia Willing to Discuss American Claims in Russia.

Moscow, Dec. 17.—"The soviet government is willing to consider separately the American private claims in Russia and to discuss each, such as the Westinghouse, International Harvester and National City bank, on its own merits," Georges Tchitcherine, foreign minister, made that statement when asked if the soviet government was willing to grant the demands of President Coolidge. M. Tchitcherine continued: "A blanket restitution of property or a reparations pledge is impossible. We made this clear at the Genoa conference." Tchitcherine discussed at length the Russia-American relations, declaring that Russia proved in her note to President Coolidge the desirability of American friendship. He added: "Russian people have no desire to repeat their revolution. Nobody can question our good faith, as all our pledges since the establishment of the soviet government have been carried out."

Escaped Convict Captured.

Wheeling, W. Va., Dec. 17.—Joe Carney, 40, one of four men who escaped from the Ohio penitentiary Sept. 8, after seriously wounding a guard there and scaling the walls, admitted, Chief of Police Frazier says, that he and another man robbed a South Wheeling jewelry store. According to the police, Carney said immediately after the robbery he and his pal divided the loot they obtained and parted.

BACK IN WISCONSIN

Sailstad and His "Sunshine" Girl Are Languishing in Jail.

Superior, Wis., Dec. 17.—Edward J. Sailstad and his "sunshine" girl are back in Superior. They are in jail. Three years ago the couple fled from Wisconsin in the glow of Sailstad's burning summer cottage. He had hoped the wife he deserted would be able to identify the ashes of a corpse he dragged from a grave to the cottage as his remains and collect $65,000 life insurance. "I am glad to be back and face the music after three long, anxious years of a vain search for happiness," Sailstad said as he was taken to jail. Sailstad and Dorothy Anderson, the "sunshine" girl, were arrested in California 10 days ago. They were brought to Superior by deputies, who had gone to that state for them.

In Their Youth

By MYRA CURTIS LANE

(©, 1923, Western Newspaper Union)

PEGGY'S father was dead. He had been a hale old man, and he had died suddenly, and the shock had momentarily made her forget her quarrel with Will Aston.

Such a foolish quarrel it had been; all about nothing, only they were both very young, and pride was resolute in both of them.

"I shall never speak to you again till you apologize," Peggy had said.

"You needn't trouble to wait," Will had answered. So they had parted, six weeks before, and both had kept their word.

And now Peggy's father was dead, and her mother and she were left alone. She had thought the shock would almost unbalance her mother. The old people had been so dependent on each other. But her mother passed her days in a dull apathy, and she shocked Peggy by her apparent indifference. Peggy could not understand.

Her thoughts were full of the old man, of her days with him. She had adored her father; they had been the best companions. It was incredible that she would never see him again in this life.

Turning over some of the things he had left, his paint-box and canvases, his papers, Peggy came upon a bundle of letters addressed to him. They were in her mother's writing. She hesitated. Then she opened one and began to read.

"It's because I love you, father," she said softly. "I'm not prying; I want you to understand I'm not prying. It's because mother doesn't seem to care, and I want so much to understand you and get into closer touch with you. It isn't prying."

Salving her conscience in this way, Peggy read. Then she read another letter and another. The whole morning went by, and she was still reading.

When lunch time came she hid the letters guiltily, and all that afternoon she read and read until at last she had read the last letter. Then, with a sigh, she folded up the packet and replaced it where she had found it.

"They were sacred letters, never meant for any other eyes; love-letters, and they told her so much that she had never guessed."

So her father and mother, in their youth, had been like her and Will Aston. They had loved fiercely, and they had quarreled fiercely; they had loved and they had hated; they had made up and they had parted forever.

And it all came down to this—the dead man and the apathetic old woman in the house, going about her work as if Peggy's father had never existed.

Peggy had never dreamed that her parents had ever lived and loved and suffered in such a human way as Will and she.

And now her mother didn't care! She went down impulsively to where the old woman was sitting. She kneeled before her. "Mother, didn't you care for father?" she begged.

"Care for him? Why, my dear, we had our little quarrels at first, but afterward we were everything to each other."

"But you—you don't seem to care so much, mother," Peggy ventured.

Her mother smiled. "When you think you care, and aren't sure, you make a dreadful fuss," she said; "but when you really care nothing seems to matter very much, because you just have each other. Some day perhaps you'll understand."

Peggy did understand. But that made it none the less terrible. It was terrible to think of all that love that had gone down the years, dwindled into this quiet old woman sitting in a chair and feeling that she had loved.

And she saw that the priceless gift of youth is never to be repeated. And she knew that, once that youth is let slip, many indeed are the compensations, but just that one thing is taken away forever. That was the error she had fallen into.

She slipped out of the house into the darkening street. She saw Will standing outside, irresolute. She flung herself into his arms.

"Will, forgive me!"

"Forgive me, Peggy. I was trying to get courage to come to you and say that I was wrong."

"Ah, we were both wrong, Will. We were letting our love slip away from us. Don't you see, Will? Let us love each other while we have each other, Will."

And suddenly Peggy realized that her father's death made no difference; in spirit he was still hers.

Self-Protection.

"You admit, then," said the Alabama judge, "that you stole the hog?"

"Ah sure has to, Judge," said the colored prisoner.

"Well, nigger, there's been a lot of hog-stealing going on around here lately, and I'm just going to make an example of you or none of us will be safe."

Second Thought.

"You say you were not fully quoted in that embarrassing interview?"

"Emphatically," answered Senator Sorghum. "The reporter got only my first thought. After the general comment on the article my second thought was entirely different."

J. F. Alexander, a merchant, was found guilty by a jury at Macon, Ga., on charges of having participated in the flogging of Ollie M. Perry.

Water Power Wasted.
The Alto Parana river, which divides Paraguay from Argentina and Brazil, and its many tributaries, could make Paraguay an important industrial center. The power of these waters is practically unknown, but is estimated as having, in some places, a fall of 200 feet, and a force of 100,000-horse power. The Iguazu falls are regarded as even more powerful than Niagara.

Infalible Method.
An amateur farmer answered an advertisement headed "A Sure Way to Make Hens Lay." This is what he got for his money: "Tie a stout string around the hen's body, place the bird on her side on a board and fasten the string underneath. If it is thought desirable, a pillow may be placed under the hen's head."—Boston Transcript.

Five federal prohibition agents were summarily dismissed by Internal Revenue Commissioner Blair. The general charge in each case was conduct unbecoming a government officer.

GLAND SURGERY TO MAKE SHEEP GROW LONGER WOOL

University Professor Expects Experiments to Succeed.

Philadelphia.—It may be possible to obtain sheep with wool half a yard long by means of gland transplantation, according to Dr. William J. Lentz, professor of anatomy in the University of Pennsylvania veterinary school.

"Of course it's too early to judge whether such results can be obtained by means of gland transplanting in sheep," Doctor Lentz said. "Gland surgery, however, is just in its infancy and it is not possible to predict what wonderful things may be accomplished."

"Heretofore desirable lengths of wool have been attained only by breeding. The method is slow and sheep raisers would welcome any new method to obtain a better product."

The promise of long-wool sheep was made recently by Dr. Serge Voronoff, the "monkey gland" surgeon, who has been conducting a series of new experiments in glandular transplanting.

He has requested the central wool committee of France to give him 75 animals to demonstrate the truth of his theory.

Doctor Voronoff says he will transplant the essential glands from 25 of the sheep to the remaining 50. The wool of the latter group will grow longer, he said. When these reproduce, their descendants also will have longer wool, he believes.

Scots Keep Relics of Queen Mary at Home

London.—Scotland has won her fight to keep the intimate relics of Mary, Queen of Scots from going to America or other foreign countries and has succeeded in buying most of them for herself.

The sale was held under exciting circumstances. Scores of patriotic Scotsmen, aroused over the danger of the precious relics forever leaving British soil, crowded into the little room.

A diamond and pearl pendant given to the queen at the time of her marriage to the dauphin of France was the only one of the relics which went to America. The company paid $5,000 for it.

While the entire sale brought $45,000, the Scots committee was more than satisfied, because it obtained those relics which for all Scotsmen have the greatest sentimental value.

Lord's Prayer Saves Girl From Wild Man

Honolulu, T. H.—Barbara Basler, six-year-old daughter of a prominent merchant, owes her escape from a man who kidnapped her to her knowledge of the Lord's prayer.

The child was stolen while playing near her home and taken to the mountain retreat of a man known as "The Wild Man of Nuuanu Valley." The abductor, according to the child, released her when she began hissing the Lord's prayer.

Last Note to Friend Halts Man's Suicide

Because he wrote a farewell note to his friend, a policeman, Alexander Jones of Wilkesbarre, Pa., failed in an attempt to commit suicide by leaping into the river.

The officer, when he received the note, hurried to the river bridge and caught hold of Alexander as he was about to jump from the railing. Alexander blamed domestic troubles for his attempt.

The Mind of a Woman.
"A woman is more religious than a man," says Dr. A. T. Schofield in "The Mind of a Woman." There is more of the emotional and the mystic. Women, being more emotional than men, are pre-eminent in the spiritual life, for love is their nature more than it is that of men.

Hotel Stenographer

BY ROE FULKERSON

"I am glad I am not hard to look at," said the Hotel Stenographer complacently.

"Where do you get that stuff" laughed the Detective.

"You do not get me, Kelly." The girl spoke placidly. "Your intake is so slow, and you are soon exhausted."

"I was trying to explain to you why I am glad I have not the looks which require me to be clever as well as educated. I like to be easy on the eye, because all good looking girls are subject to temptations and I just dote on temptations."

"A temptation is like a good rule; it works both ways."

"If I get tempted and resist it, I have such a self-satisfied sense of morality and high purpose that I can preen myself and be happy for days and days just thinking how much better I am than some girls who would have yielded."

"Then if I do yield to it, I have such a wonderful, good time."

"Last night Jerry McAdoo wanted me to go out in his car for a ride in the country, and Jerry is such a necker I resisted the temptation to go with him and felt mighty good about it. Later Tim Cassidy asked me to go to Reitsville to a dance and I yielded to that temptation and had one of the best times I have had in my life."

"One of the nicest things about being a good looking girl with nice feet and blue eyes and hair that is fastened to your head by its own roots, instead of being anchored on with hairpins, is—"

"Who told you you were pretty?" asked the House Detective.

"Haven't I a pair of pretty and honest blue eyes?"

"Yeah!" said he grudgingly.

"They told me," replied the girl, with finality.

AMUSEMENTS

What are said to be some of the most remarkable night scenes ever filmed will be seen in "The Go-Getter," a Paramount-Cosmopolitan production based on Peter B. Kyne's popular story of the same name, directed by E. H. Griffith, which will be shown at the Metropolitan theater next Monday. These particular scenes in the picture were filmed in Long Island, N. Y., from Mineola to Hicksville, and while they were being "shot" the company worked for three "days" from sunset to sunrise.

One scene in particular is said to be a revelation in photography. This pictures a race at night between an aeroplane and a speeding express train, culminating when the plane forges ahead and lights alongside the railroad tracks several hundred yards in advance of the train. One of the most melodramatic incidents in the picture then takes place as T. Roy Barnes, featured in the picture, flags the oncoming express, which is "shot" while going at the rate of forty miles an hour. The train used in this scene was chartered from the Long Island branch of the Pennsylvania railroad. Three huge motor generating sets were used in the filming of these scenes, which were photographed by Harold Wenstrom.

Seena Owen is featured with Mr. Barnes in "The Go-Getter," as also are William Norris, Tom Lewis and Louis Wolheim. Frederick Stantley, John Carr and Frank Currier are included in an excellent cast.

YOUTHFUL THIEVES

Boys Sheltered by Mrs. Chester Hedges Took Guns and Watch.

The home of Mrs. Chester B. Hedges was ransacked by two boys named Ray and Roy Burns of Buffalo, West Virginia, Sunday afternoon and stole the following articles; a 32-20 Winchester rifle valued at $35; a $14 revolver and gold hunting case watch that was an heirloom in the family. The boys were 14 and 16 years of age. They had been at the Hedges home for the past five days and were taken in and given shelter. The family thought enough of them to trust them, and the house Sunday for a few hours.

While the family was absent the boys disappeared.

Breakfast for Doughboys.

The French cooks could never get in line with the American breakfast which was demanded by the American soldiers and others from this country who were called to France during the war. The French breakfast consists of a roll and coffee, while the American demanded eggs and bacon as well.

Curious Name Explained.

The warders of the tower of London were first styled beefeaters in the reign of Edward VI. The word was probably derived from the French buffeter, signifying literally "to eat beef." It was used in connection with the yeomen of the guard, originating at the coronation of Henry VII. in 1485.

MANY ODD NAMES

Unkind Parents Responsible for Children's Plight.

Pepper, Lemon, Salt, Nothing and Something, Among Names Found in England.

Naming the baby in most families is, quite properly, a serious affair. No name can be associated with too illustrious a personage of history, too fascinating a character in romance.

Nevertheless, it is surprising to what names, and conjunctions of names, reckless or cruelly jocular parents will condemn their children.

English records of recent years reveal that Robert New named his two sons Nothing and Something. Mr. Mixer, Mr. Peel and Mr. Codd named their respective babies Pepper, Lemon and Salt, while Mr. Ware's little girl became China and Mr. Gentile's, Always.

An appeal for legal change of name allowed the general public to learn that the brothers Pigg bore the Christian names, Black, Brown, Gay and Guiney. Their request, it is needless to say, was promptly granted.

Practical joking at the expense of helpless infants is unpardonable, but Mr. and Mrs. Million of Oregon could never agree upon names entirely satisfactory to both, so as a matter of convenience, they had resorted to numbers.

The Washington official who relates the story says that when the names of subscribers to a government loan were sent in years ago, one was that of "Ten Million." It was naturally supposed to be an assumed name, and a letter was sent to the address given, rather sharply stating that bonds could be registered in real names only, and that no further attention would be paid to his subscription unless he gave his true name.

An explanatory reply was soon received from Mr. Million, written upon paper bearing the printed letterhead of a firm of Million & Million, reiterating his own name, and adding those of his brothers and sisters, One, Two, Three, Four, Five, Six, Seven (his partner) and the rest.

As the Million children grew up, most of them, he admitted, have modified their numeral prefixes; the Misses One and Three Million, for example, becoming Una and Tria, while Ten himself was commonly known as Ten-is. Legally, however, his name remained unchanged; and today he is registered as Ten Million, his only rightful name in the eyes of the law. —Kansas City Star.

Chivalry Has Its Limitations.

It is a difficult feat for a henpecked husband to be chivalrous, as a New Rochelle girl is willing to state. She was walking along a road in Residence park the other afternoon. It looked like rain and so she was delighted when a car drew up to the curb and a young married man of her acquaintance invited her to get in and he'd give her a lift to her house.

She accepted with alacrity; but they had gone only a few blocks when he suddenly announced that she would have to get out. Completely mystified, she complied with his strange request; and then she understood.

Advancing from a cross street, but unaware of their presence, was the jealous wife of the would-be-been gallant. —New York Sun and Globe.

Getting in First Licks.

A good many nations have been known to justify their own aggression upon their neighbors much as a little girl named Katherine explained her treatment of her sister Margaret.

The quarrel between the two children, says the Argonaut, waxed hot and furious. Katherine hit Margaret with a stick, and then their father interfered.

"Katherine," he said, "did you hit Margaret with that stick?" Katherine defiantly confessed her guilt.

"Why did you do it?" demanded the father.

"Because," Katherine retorted, and righteous indignation flashed in her eyes, "afterwards she hit me!" —Youth's Companion.

Certainly a Sad Story.

This is rather a sad story, so let my gentle reader prepare to shed a silent tear. Even those who do not come under the category of "gentle" may well pause awhile and wonder on the moral.

It concerns two boxers who, after waiting months for a fight that would bring them into the limelight, each got his chance and each got beaten. After their fights they compared notes.

"Rum thing," said one. "I got a bout, and now I'm blessed if I can get about!"

"Same here," nodded the other, gloomily. "I got a round, and now, dash me, if I think I'll ever be able to get around again!"

Progression.

"Why is it that the more you have the more you want?"

"I don't know," replied Mr. Dustin Stax, "unless it's because you feel you've got to keep the profits progressing in order to keep up with the income tax." —Washington Star.

Unique.

Kenilworth—Why in the name of heavens does he ride in such a rattle-trap of a machine?

Glencoe—Claims the sound of the machine drowns out his wife's talking.

Drawing the Line.

An actress, who had retired from the stage and bought a little house in the country, decided to start a chicken farm.

Accordingly, acting on the principle that all big businesses have small beginnings, she bought a hen and a setting of thirteen eggs.

As she had no knowledge of poultry at all, she wrote to a poultry journal, asking how long the eggs would take to hatch out. The paper replied:

"Three weeks for chickens and four for ducks."

Some weeks later she wrote again to the paper:

"Many thanks for your advice. However, at the end of three weeks there were no chickens hatched out, and, as I did not want ducks, I took the hen off!" —Poultry Journal.

Early Rubber Goods Imperfect.

Many were the troubles that early manufacturers of rubber goods experienced on account of the propensity of rubber to expand or contract with the heat. Daniel Webster, who was Mr. Goodyear's counsel in his patent litigation, humorously referred to a fine cloak of India rubber he once owned, stating that in cold weather it stood well by itself, and that he often set it out on the porch surmounted by his hat, many persons passing by mistaking it for the Sage of Marshfield himself.

THIS, TOO, WILL PASS

Fading. slowly fading, like the slowly fading sun.

Going. slowly going, on the journey now begun.

Dying. slowly dying, slowly passing from the fun.

Like the passing of the flowers, dropping petals one by one.

Sobbing. sadly sobbing for the things in life undone.

Crying. softly crying—for of pleasure there is none.

Waiting. always waiting, till the weary race is run.

Till at last the trial is over and the victory lost or won.

Oh, the light of hope is fading, and the bloom of life is gone.

All is dying, slowly dying, as the days go drifting on.

And in sorrow I am turning to the land that lies beyond.

While I'm waiting, praying, fearing, for the coming of the dawn.

—Frank Kenneth Young.

ORIGIN OF THE ROSICRUCIANS

Secret Fraternity Was Founded During the Latter Part of the Fourteenth Century.

A secret fraternity alleged to have been founded during the latter part of the fourteenth century by Christian Rosenkreuz, a German mystic, who dwelt for a time in India and Egypt, where he acquired a profound knowledge of the occult arts. The Rosicrucians, like the alchemists, pretended to transmute metals, to prolong life, and to possess knowledge of what was occurring in distant places. They first became known to the world early in the seventeenth century through the publication of certain documents said to have been issued by them; but, according to many authorities, their existence was extremely doubtful. The Rosicrucians were also called the Brothers of the Rosy Cross, from the notion that the name is derived from crux (cross) and rosa (rose).

Brewer, however, says that the word Rosicrucian comes from ros (dew) and rosa (rose).

"Dew was considered by the ancient chemists as the most powerful solvent of gold, and cross in alchemy is the synonym of light, because any figure of the cross contains the three letters L, X, V (light)." —Brewer's Dictionary of Phrases and Fables.

Thousand Languages at Least.

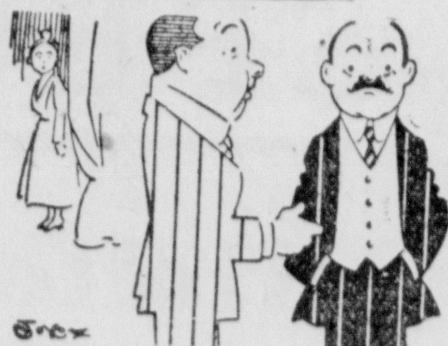

Every six weeks the American Bible society publishes some form of the Scriptures in a new language. In the spring of this year the society issued a little one-leaf pamphlet entitled "Every Man in His Own Tongue," which created unexpected interest. It listed the 770 different languages in which the Scriptures in their entirety or in part has been published by the society. The list should include 1,000 different languages, authorities at the Bible house say, and already they have added half a dozen to the number. The society claims that there are nearly 300 more languages spoken by a group of people sufficiently large to warrant publishing the Scriptures for them.

A-Shopping in Wheelbarrow.

Wheelbarrows are the principal means of freight and passenger traffic in Tsinanfu, a walled city of 300,000 inhabitants at the land end of the Shantung railway in China. Nearly all the freight is moved in this manner, some of the loads being conveyed distances of fifteen to twenty miles a day. "Milady" frequently returns from her shopping tours with her bundles on one side of the wheelbarrow while she herself rides on the other side. Half a dozen persons may ride in front of a puffing and perspiring coolie. The wheel is in the center of the barrow, which aids in balancing the load. If it is unusually heavy, another man or boy helps to pull by means of a rope or strap thrown across his shoulders. In a few instances a mule is the assistant, but it requires a man to lead the mule.

Too Much Argument.

Two drovers were sitting in the inn of an English village. They had been sitting there for nearly an hour, and so far neither had spoken. At last one of them opened his mouth. "Didst see old brown cow on th' moor?" he asked. Another half-hour elapsed. Then the second drover spoke. "It wasn't brown cow," he said. "Twas brown bull." Silence again for another half-hour. The first man rose and made for the door. "Going?" queried the other. "Aye," came the reply. "Far too much argument here for me."

CATTLE EAT DEAD FOR PHOSPHORUS THEY CRAVE

Element Lacking in Regular Food in South African Districts.

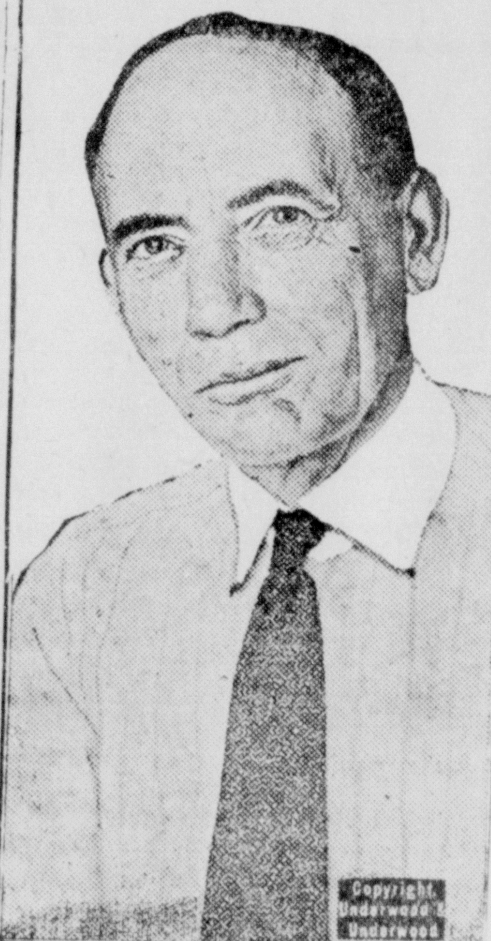

New York.—Cattle so crave a certain substance which is lacking from their food in some districts in South Africa that they eagerly search for the bodies of dead animals and greedily devour their bones, even though the flesh still clings to the skeletons and even though the dead animal be one of their own mates. Such is the statement of Dr. H. H. Green of the division of veterinary research at Pretoria, South Africa, in a recent report on this strange condition made to the American Society of Biological Chemists.

Osteophagia, as this bone-eating habit of the cattle is termed, results directly from a lack of efficient phosphorus in the food adequately to supply the body; the low content of this element in the food can be traced to the very small amount of it in the soil. The animals have learned that bones are a very rich source of the substance they crave, since the skeleton is made up almost entirely of calcium phosphate and they satisfy their desire for phosphates just as many animals gratify their appetite for salt at salt licks.

Acute osteophagia occurs in almost all the animals in certain regions for about ten months in the year, according to Doctor Green, and only abates for about two months while the grass is very young. This disease can be prevented, experiments proved, by the use of phosphate manuring in the soil or by the administration of phosphate to the animals affected, but in the latter case it reappears again when this substance is removed from the diet.

According to this scientist, osteophagia in itself does not usually result fatally, although it may affect the growth of young cattle or lessen the production of milk in cows, results which are also attributable to the low phosphate content of the food. Its economic importance lies in the fact that it is indirectly the cause of a fatal bovine disease, common in South Africa, which is known as lamziekte. This latter disease, characterized by a paralysis of the throat and neck muscles, lameness and a humping of the back, is caused by a toxin produced by microorganisms harbored in decaying flesh. The bone-eating animals in their attempt to gratify the desire for phosphate eat bones together with adhering putrid flesh; this flesh too often contains the toxin which causes lamziekte.

Lonely Islanders Look in Doubt at Wireless

St. Kilda, Outer Hebrides.—Although cut off from civilization since last August, for no steamer is able to fight its way through the storm and fog during the autumn and winter months, 75 lonely inhabitants of this island look askance at the telegraph and will not use the wireless station which was built here during the war by the British.

Recently a steamer sailed from the island of Lewis, the largest and most northerly of the Hebrides group, and thus broke St. Kilda's nine months' solitude by bringing it mails, provisions and other necessities.

During their isolated months the islanders send their letters to Lewis in tin canisters in sheepskin buoys. They launch these when there is a gale of northwest wind. Sometimes the buoys get blown out of their course and take the letters thousands of miles, but very often they cross the sixty-mile stretch of sea to Lewis island safely and are then posted from that place.

Letting George Do It.

The fence in front of the farmhouse was badly damaged, and it seemed to sensitive Mrs. Dairybutter, the farmer's wife, that all the neighbors were remarking about it as they passed by. "When are you going to get that fence in the front mended?" she asked her husband.

"Oh, next week!" was the reply. "I'm just waiting for George to come home from college."

"But whatever will the boy know about mending a fence?" she asked in astonishment.

"Well, replied the farmer, 'he ought to know a lot. He wrote and told me the other day that he had been taking a lot of fencing lessons this term.'—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

The Rough Diamond.

A story about Mrs. Barton French, the autocratic society leader of New York, comes from the Riviera.

A multimillionaire succeeded in getting himself presented to Mrs. French one day at Ciro's in Monte Carlo, but she never recognized him thereafter. This annoyed the multimillionaire very much, and he got a young lady to intercede for him.

"Really, Mrs. French"—thus ran the young lady's intercession—"the man is really not such a bad sort. A diamond in the rough, you know."

"Yes, I know," said Mrs. French. "That's why I'm cutting him."

Gorgeous Note in Chic New Clothes

Wool Materials and Velvets Among Rich Fabrics for Gala Days.

The season will be one of great importance to the creators and the wearers of smart clothes. With the assurance that society is to spend the winter merrily, even brilliantly, there is answer to the demand for an appropriate wardrobe, writes a fashion correspondent in the New York Times.

The prelude to the season was played this summer by the Americans abroad, during those weeks when Paris was a veritable storm center for the beau monde and its activities. The impetus came from within the gayest inner circle of the American colony at the French capital, and the most marvelous creations were flashed before an appraising public at the various gala affairs, the Grand Prix, the Ball, at Deauville. On all of these occasions the American women who carried long purses to the other side set a plunging pace and opened for Paris artists a vista of greater prosperity than they have known for many a year.

The London drawing room, at which such an unusually large number of Americans were presented this year, and the court functions are said to have made an interesting study in contrasts. It was the reverse side of the picture of former times, when a presentation gown was the envy and dream of American womankind, who followed with reverent steps the styles worn by the great ladies of Europe. Now it is the American woman whose beauty and dash spur the fancy of foreign modistes and cause the haut monde to "sit up and take notice." At this last drawing room and the court ball some of the toilets worn by Americans were magnificent.

The new woollens of which the snappy sports outfits are built are extremely English in character this season, rich in texture and warm in color tones. The neutral shades, browns and tans and taupe, are now quite superseded by brighter colors and more delicate shades which are being shown with a great variety of mixtures. Tan has become a creamy beige, gray is less cold and browns are russet and glowing. Delightful greens are used for some of these sports suits.

For Outdoor Wear.

One especially chic suit is made of a wool material in which the threads of sage green and soft pastel green are interwoven with yellow in wide stripes. The skirt of this suit is severely plain, straight and narrow, and is ankle length. The little box coat is closed with a single row of green bone buttons to the neck and fluffy orange fox forms the high collar, cuffs and a wide band straight around the bottom. As is common in many of the new sports suits, a practical pocket is concealed in each side of the jacket, under the fur. Heavy yellow doeskin gauntlets and shoes are worn with this outfit, and the hat is a small yellow felt with slightly rolling brim, having a scarf of green silk wound tight around the crown.

Some very attractive suits and wraps for the out-of-door games are made of large plaids that are now so popular and for which they are charmingly adapted. These are, of course, so flashy in themselves that not a stitch of trimming is required—on some scarcely a button is in evidence—but the use of fur is universal.

The sports coats grow more and more conspicuously smart. They are square and straight, or flaring, or wrap around, and the materials are highly appealing—downy, deep piled and light, in all the new autumn shades. Sports coats are quite different from the usual wrap for street wear, in which some of the most attractive models are tiered, and others are cut with a flaring bias flounce that is proving to be very well liked. They are made of the smoother, finer woven fabrics, mostly in plain colors, and cling close to the figure. These are the coats that will be worn equally with fur wraps for out-of-town weddings and dressy daytime occasions, town or country, and are especially suitable for the horse show, for which a more tailleur style is now correct.

This is a season of imported materials. The demand for rich fabrics has inspired every branch of dress goods manufacture, and the market is now stocked high with gorgeous weaves of wool, fine and coarse; of silks, brocades and velvets—particularly velvets.

Hundreds of yards of gold brocade, silver brocade, of metal combined with silk, luscious velvets, in superb patterns, and as many yards more in plain cloth of gold and silver, make a truly amazing illustration of the extravagance of the present-day standards.

Next in prominence to the handsome brocades of metal and silk are the velvets in every lovely color. Of these,

Paris Gown of Satin, So Heavy With Pearls and Brilliants That Two Straps Are Required to Carry Its Weight.

Salome velvet is the edition de luxe, with a sheen and fineness that is exquisite to the touch and the eye. It is literally the rage for softly draped gowns for afternoon and evening wear.

This most delicious phase of velvet is being used with a greater success for the most elaborate dinner and ball gown. At a private exhibition of advance models in one of the most exclusive houses in New York were shown some gowns of rare distinction, of which black and colored velvets were the basis.

Winsome Draped Models.

In the draped, slender style an evening gown of apple-green Salome velvet was drawn lightly about the figure—just one piece, it appeared to be—in graceful lines, caught at one side with a huge ornament of brilliants and green stones. One corner of the drapery was left long and trailing, giving to the gown the appearance of having a train, though the regular separate train is now quite passe.

The neck of this dress was cut conservatively decollete in the V shape, that is ever flattering, and quite low in the back. The velvet fell softly, very long about the feet at one side and was slightly shorter at the other side. Ruby, jade, apple green, marigold, apricot, hydrangea, ivory and, most chic of all, black velvet, are used for the most costly gowns done by leading designers for evening gowns, in which the velvet is combined with metal and silver flowers.

Black fur is a striking note in a number of white and light-colored gowns, baby fox being the most delicate among the many varieties shown. Lavin has evolved one of the most distinguished models of the season. It is a dancing frock of fantastic type. Visualized, it has a spreading birdtail suggestion made of goosehair. The foundation is of white satin over which the overgown is built. Circular flounces of tulle in the most lovely shades of violet, hydrangea blue, orange and green are gathered full upon a fan-shaped skirt that is narrow in the front, beginning at the waistline and falling away in widening lines toward the middle of the gown, sweeping the floor.

Black Gaining Favor.

Black, in fact, is gaining in favor, as the rather bewildering array of colors is presented, and now that velvet is so fashionable, it is employed in the most striking creations. It is found to be so complimentary that most smartly gowned women are investing rather heavily in black gowns, wraps and millinery.

Another novelty in composition is of black velvet, and also has a deep flounce of the same material about the skirt, shortened in front and caught with enormous flat, conventionalized scarlet poppies. One of these flowers almost covers the front of the bodice, and two others are sewn in regular spaces down the front of the dress. A jeweled band trimming passes over the shoulders for supporting straps and is looped in long strands under the arms at each side of the figure. The long, loose bodice is open at each side, showing a tightly drawn slip of white satin, and a combination of black, scarlet and white is startling in the extreme.

DIVORCE EASY FOR INDIANS

Separation of Married Couple Constituted a Legal Divorce—Upheld by Commissioner.

In the period that the Indians lived as tribal peoples, following their own marriage customs, a separation of a married couple constituted a legal divorce. This is the decision just handed down by Charles H. Burke, Indian commissioner, and is considered as one of great importance that will be followed many times, no doubt, in determining heirship cases among the Poncas, Otoes and other tribes.

The decision came in determining heirs of Little Soldier, who for a long time was prominent in the Ponca tribe. In Nebraska, prior to the tribe coming to their present Oklahoma homes, Little Soldier had taken two sisters as wives, Ella Little Soldier and Henrietta First Moon. The latter retained her maiden name in order to distinguish herself from her sister. Indian custom permitted Little Soldier to have plural wives.

When a congressional act of March 12, 1897, directed each Ponca possessing more than one wife to pick out his favorite and thus divorce the other, Little Soldier failed to do so. Evidently he liked both sisters too well to choose between them.

The investigation to determine the heirs of Little Soldier started last December before George Hoyo, the superintendent for the Poncas and affiliated tribes, and the findings were sent by him to Commissioner Burke. All the principal figures in the marital mixup now are dead excepting Henrietta First Moon. She claimed the estate as having been his Indian custom wife, whereas Starling White Tail contested her as the son of Alice Eagle White Tail.—Kansas City Star.

The American Way.

"In England they run horse races the other way around the track," says the Howard Courier. "But don't laugh at it. That was the old way before America got in. We were the folks who changed the style. Who remembers how the Romans used to run the chariot races? They raced on round tracks before the British did. The famous picture of Ben Hur's chariot race shows him going around the American way."

Force of Habit.

An Angeleno recently returned from Europe laughingly tells of meeting an old friend of his in Venice, Italy, who has a studio in California at Carmel-by-the-Sea. He asked the artist which of the two places he liked the best.

"Well," replied the artist, "I like them both, but Venice is awfully tough on my cat."

"I don't get you," said the Angeleno, "what difference does it make to the cat whether it's in Carmel or Venice?"

"Well, it's this way," explained the artist. "I've got the habit of tossing the cat out the window into the back yard every night, and of course here in Venice there isn't any back yard."

Potato Brown-Rot Is Cause of Big Losses

Bacterial Disease Occurs Especially on New Land.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Potato brown-rot, a bacterial disease which not only attacks potatoes, but also eggplant, pepper, tomato, tobacco, flintweed, black nightshade, peanut, and other plants, is destructive to plants in the field and to the tubers after they have been harvested, according to Department Circular 281, "Potato Brown-Rot," by F. C. Meler and G. K. K. Link, recently published by the United States Department of Agriculture to provide information on the prevention of losses in shipping and marketing the potato crop. This disease is world-wide in tropical countries and occurs especially on low land. The trouble begins in the field through infection from the soil or from leaf-eating insects. The plants wilt and die. The tubers show a ring browning, especially at the stem end, and decay rapidly. Other cut, bruised, or injured potatoes in the same package become infected by contact.

Field control is not understood. Further experiments are needed, but losses in shipping are lessened by early harvesting of diseased fields, through sorting, and immediate use. Decay in transit or storage is lessened if the potatoes can be held at a temperature below 55 degrees.

Copies of the circular may be had by addressing the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Destroying Foulbrood in Season Favoring Malady

The way to handle American foulbrood in a season when conditions are favorable for the spread of the disease is to kill the bees after dark with sulphur or a pint of gasoline. This is the advice of C. O. Yost, secretary of the Indiana Bee Keepers' association. He suggests several plans. Says he:

"Stop the entrance tight, carry the hive inside a bee-tight enclosure, there destroy combs, etc., and scorch fixtures thoroughly. Another plan: Do all the treating under a light screen tent that may be carried around and set over the colony to be handled. Another plan: Take a sick colony a couple of miles from any bees, treat there, allow them to quiet down and move home. If gasoline is used the entrance should first be closed. Raise the hive cover and with a little smoke chase all bees down from top bar, then empty the pint of gasoline around top of frames, close hive cover tight. The hive and dead bees may be taken inside and the usual methods of cleaning, etc., carried out.

Care for Chicken House Is of Great Importance

The poultry house should be littered at all times with straw eight to twelve inches deep. This should be renewed whenever it becomes damp, badly broken up or so full of droppings that grains thrown down are not quickly lost from sight.

Where a dropping board is used it should be cleaned frequently (once a week is satisfactory), because disease germs and mites accumulate here. If not removed, the feet of the birds also become very foul, causing a large percentage of dirty eggs.

As a matter of precaution against disease the poultry house should be thoroughly cleaned and then soaked in every part with a 3 per cent solution of a good stock dip. Cleanse once every year.

Fresh Corn Stover Most Palatable to Live Stock

Fresh corn stover is palatable, but after it has been exposed to the weather for a few months it loses much of its palatability and should not be depended upon to supply very much, if any, nutrients to the cow. It is better when the stover is needed as a feed to ensile it, for in the silo it will keep more palatable, a larger portion of it will be consumed, and better results will be obtained by feeding it. Corn stover should be looked upon as a reasonably good, dry carbonaceous feed, but should be fed in limited quantities because of its low protein content.

Profit in Sweet Clover to Every Owner of Bees

In the bee business there is no profit in box-hives or "gums"; nor in shiftlessness; nor in cultivating honey plants just for bees. However, the sweet clovers, both white and yellow, and others, grown also for soiling crops or forage will pay you well. Sweet clover along railroads, bankings, ditch lines, fence rows and the like will not prove a weed but a profit to every farmer having bees.

Multiplication Table Is Still Handy for Farmer

The farmer still has use for the multiplication table, despite the ups and downs in the agricultural situation, according to some figures just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. For example, the output of skim milk powder has doubled in the last five years; the number of cow-testing associations has been doubled in the last six years; the quantity of ice cream produced has doubled in the last 12 years.

To Make Mirror Brilliant.
To clean a mirror in such a way as to bring it to the highest state of brilliancy, very fine whiting, or, better, precipitated chalk, is one of the best-known agents. The mirror should be rubbed gently with methylated spirits with a soft, clean sponge, and then dusted with the whiting or chalk. After a moment it should be wiped with a dry cloth. Another softer cloth, or, more effectively, a silk handkerchief, should be used for the final polishing, which should leave the glass clear and brilliant.

Proper Food for Parrot.
Parrots in the wild state live on seed and fruit, and should, while in captivity, be fed as nearly as possible the same kind of food. They should be fed sunflower seed, hemp seed, boiled yellow corn, stale bread soaked in water, an occasional piece of apple or banana, roasted peanuts, dry crackers. Plenty of water and gravel should be kept in the cage. The parrot's cage should be cleaned every day.

Vera Cruz.
Vera Cruz has the unique record of having been twice captured by American forces, once in 1846 when we were at war with Mexico, and again in 1917, when we were not at war with Mexico. However, all we seem to do with it after we get it is to give it back again, so its citizens probably feel little worried at the vicissitudes of war. Indeed, they have recently raised a statue in honor of the noble defenders of Vera Cruz against the gringos, which shows that they feel they are adequately protected.

MORE GOOD WORK

Being Accomplished By Rotarians, Shown In Cuts In Article Below.

The good work of the Rotarians teen and Marie fourteen, when the still continues, as is shown in the county nurse found them in school pictures, those of brother and sister. Only about six months elapsed better, Raymond and Marie Redland, between the pictures, "before and of Felicity, O. Raymond was seven—after."

Self Control.

"How happy is he, born or taught, Whose passions not his master are; Lord of himself, tho not of lands, And having nothing, yet hath all!"

Parents must work out the welfare of their children. The church and the school may contribute something towards the child's development but upon the parent rests the great responsibility.

The school holds the child but a few hours each day and under circumstances which prohibit individual training.

How then may the parent set about giving their children a training resulting in a life for which they will be grateful and at the same time win for themselves, as parents, respect and love?

Certainly not by giving the child his own way in everything; buying him everything he sees; yielding to his every whim even to allowing him to leave off braces, casts, jackets, etc. Such treatment will only make the child a domineering, selfish, unhappy, and perhaps more crippled man or woman.

There is no influence that will affect the child as the home environment. Therefore let the home atmosphere be one of cheerfulness, fairness and confidence.

You wonder why your child is selfish. It depends upon the way the child is handled as to whether he is selfish or unselfish. The crippled child has suffered so much that we get into the habit of doing everything for him and listening to demands that grow more and more unreasonable, resulting in an uncontrolled selfishness. This allowed to go unchecked can only result in great unhappiness for both child and parent.

The child soon demands that we go out of our way to do unreasonable things. Is it right for us to encourage such a spirit? On the contrary, to cater to his every wish is doing the child an injustice.

Proper actions in a child must be based upon confidence. Parents must appreciate this simple fact and appeal to the child's mind and heart. Firmly and in all kindness lead the child to see that there are others who must also be considered and that it is not right for him to have more than his share of the privileges.

Make the child have a good time helping you do things for others and the spirit of unselfishness will be developed in a positive way. Look carefully for small instances of generosity and happily show your approval. Make frequent use of the positive suggestion that your child is generous and encourage and praise him for every effort in the right direction.

Plan each day to share more fully the life of your child. Above all let him realize that you are his friend and that you are both working together for the good of others. In the making of some one else happy he finds happiness himself.—Smiles.

RECOVERING FROM OPERATION.

Mrs. George Rothe, formerly of this city, who underwent an operation at St. Francis hospital, Columbus, December 3, and who was in a critical condition is slowly recovering.
